

GEORGE DEMANDS ROOSEVELT TAKE STAND ON THIRD TERM FOR 'GOOD OF NATION'

Allies To Get Their Fill Of War, Hitler Threatens

NAZIS TO LAUNCH 'SECOND PHASE,' FUEHRER WARNS

Nation Protected Against Attack From Rear by Friendship With Italy and Russia, He Boasts.

By ALVIN J. STEINKOPF.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler, his voice shrill with emotion and knife-sharp with bitter irony, predicted ominously tonight before a vast Sports Palast mass meeting that England and France alike will get "the fight" he said they had asked for, and voiced his utmost confidence that Germany would win the war.

It was the seventh anniversary of his elevation to chancellor. His speech, the first formal one he had made since November 8, when he barely escaped death in the Munich beer hall explosion, was announced to the world only a few hours before he went to the platform, and the place in which he was speaking was known outside Germany only when the radio broadcast began to come over loudspeakers.

"Second Phase" Begins.
(Hitler declared that Germany's strength is near its peak and she is ready to carry the fight to the Allies in the "second phase" of the war, the United Press said.)

(Germany is prepared for the "second phase" of the war, he said, because friendly Italy and Russia stand guard against any Allied attempt to attack Germany's rear as they did in 1914-1918.)

("Prime Minister Chamberlain already is yearning for this second phase," he shouted. "Through his middlemen he has let the hope be expressed that now the fighting with bolsheviks may begin and that this fight will not halt before women and children are victims. We knew this beforehand and prepared accordingly.")

"Old Mr. Chamberlain."
"Old Mr. Chamberlain with his Bible," Premier Daladier, of France, and "French generals" and Winston Churchill, British first lord of the admiralty, were the personalities upon which Hitler's scorn fell successfully.

"England and France" alike

Huge 'Ice Gorge' May Choke Mississippi River for Month

Mountainous Mass at Friar Point, Miss., Extends 12 Miles Upstream; Warmer Weather May Increase Trouble; Stranded Boats Need Aid.

FRIAR POINT, Miss., Jan. 30.—(AP)—The lower Mississippi river today was choked by a miles-long ice gorge which river pilots called the greatest in history, and which they believed may block navigation throughout February.

RUMANIA MASSES 2,000,000 TROOPS

Many of Men Under Arms Will Be Entrenched in Frontier Forts.

BUCHAREST, Jan. 30.—(UP)—Rumania is calling up additional military classes and is expected to have nearly 2,000,000 men under arms within 30 days with many of them entrenched in the new chain of fortifications along the frontiers, it was understood tonight.

The estimated 2,000,000 men under arms will be retained indefinitely, perhaps until the end of the European war, it was understood.

UNDERPASS PLAN GIVEN QUALIFIED COUNTY APPROVAL

Commissioners Ask City To Meet Three Stipulations; Special Council Session Sought Today.

By WILLARD COPE.

Victory for the movement to erect the West North avenue underpass appeared assured yesterday by unanimous action of Fulton county's five commissioners of roads and revenues.

They voted to submit to the city this proposition:

The county will accept responsibility for meeting the federal government's requirements attached to the offer of $485,000 with which to do the actual construction, if—

(1) The city will make its $57,500 earmarked for rights-of-way available to the county;

(2) Will allow the county to negotiate with the railroad involved—the Southern and N. C. & St. L.—looking toward a larger contribution from them than the proposed $20,000, and

(3) Will cause its (the city's) legal department to co-operate in any condemnation proceedings which may be necessary to gain rights-of-way at a proper figure.

Special Council Session.

Councilman George B. Lyle, chairman of city council's public works committee, last night said he will ask Mayor Hartsfield today to call a special meeting of city council at the "earliest possible moment to authorize the mayor to enter into a contract with the county to complete the project and to pay the $57,500 into the county treasury as the city's share of the cost."

"I think we should act with every reasonable haste," Lyle said. "Men need jobs, and the city and county need the underpass. I think we should stipulate in our contract that the improvement be executed in accordance with plans and specifications already prepared by the construction department and to which federal engineers have agreed."

Praises County Spirit.
"It seems to me that the county is exhibiting a splendid spirit of co-operation, and if they are able to get better trades than we were, I congratulate them. The main thing is to get the project started so we will not lose the $485,000 already earmarked for it."

"So far as I am concerned, it doesn't matter whether the city, county, federal government or any other agency builds that underpass. I know we need it and can not afford to pass up the opportunity of getting it."

"I shall ask Mayor Hartsfield tomorrow to set a time for the special council session to take quick action."

Clarke Donaldson, city chief of construction, could not be reached for a statement last night.

States Proposition.

Chairman Ed L. Almand stated the proposition informally at a special session of the commissioners, and it was presented as a motion by Commissioner Troy Chastain, seconded by Commissioner I. Gloff Hailey and carried without dissent.

It will be conveyed to Mayor Hartsfield by Courtland Gilbert, secretary of the County Planning Commission, to which the commissioners two weeks ago referred the underpass offer of the federal government, pending more than four years, for recommendation.

This solution also had been suggested.

Is This Hollywood? --- No, It's U. S. Capital

Hollywood stars were a "dime a dozen" last night in the capital as they participated in the half-dozen or more birthday dances honoring the President. These three, Dorothy Lamour, Mickey Rooney and Tyrone Power, are off on a round of parties.

F.D.R. THANKS U.S. FOR POLIO PARTIES

Voices Hope the Future Will See Continuation of Children's Benefits.

(Picture on Page 24.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(AP)—To the hundreds of thousands dancing at birthday parties in his honor tonight President Roosevelt voiced the hope that proceeds of the annual celebration could be extended in future years "to the care of all crippled children," as well as to infantile paralysis victims.

That wish was the second proposal made on his 58th anniversary for improved health services. He began the day's observance by sending to congress a birthday message requesting a federal hospital-building program for poor areas.

Then, after a day of relaxation and an evening among old friends, the President went to a battery of microphones in the White House to broadcast to an estimated 25,000 birthday parties "my heartfelt thanks for what they have done."

"Army . . . to Save Lives."

"Thank you, and God bless you," he said to those he described as the largest "volunteer army" ever put into the field in a single day—an army four or five times larger than the 3,000,000 American men under arms during the World War, he said, but an army "which has joined the march to save life and not to take."

Roosevelt Is Beating Drums Of Party Peace in Georgia

Recent Appointments Show President Has a Kindly Eye for All Factions as Campaign Nears; Camp Off for Washington Today.

By L. A. FARRELL.

With the projected elevation of District Attorney Lawrence Camp to the federal bench apparently only a matter of a short time, there were definite indications yesterday that President Roosevelt is taking the bull by the horns in an effort to smooth out the deeply laid wrinkles in Georgia democracy before the 1940 campaign gets under way.

The Camp appointment, which is understood to be ready to go to the senate for confirmation soon, is the third of a series of moves by the President in recent weeks which have tended to heal the sores on the body politic of the state, some of which have been there since former Governor Talmadge launched his first foray against the New Deal far back in 1935.

$10,000 Jobs.
District Attorney Camp is understood to have been chosen either for a place on the federal customs court or on the District of Columbia federal court. There are two places vacant on the customs court and one on the district court. All three posts pay $10,000 a year and are lifetime appointments.

If and when the Camp appointment is announced, it will be added to those gestures made by the President in recent months all of which have made Georgia's democracy generally happy whether they were so designed or not.

Reappointment of J. Saxton Daniel as United States attorney for the southern Georgia district. Appointment of R. L. MacDougall as WPA administrator.

Cox Reappointed.
Reappointment of Charles H. Cox as United States marshal for the north Georgia district.

And to these shortly (it is expected) will be added: Reappointment of Howell Cone, of Statesboro, to be collector of customs at the port of Savannah. Appointment of a satisfactory-to-all successor to Camp as district attorney for north Georgia.

In the Daniel reappointment, the President tendered the first olive branch to Senator George whom he sought unsuccessfully to purge in 1938. The reappointment

PRESIDENT TOLD STAND IS 'VITAL' CONCERN OF PARTY

Senator Warns Confusion Will Arise From Choice of Delegates If F. D. R. Keeps Silent.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS, Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 30.—Georgia's Senator Walter F. George today called upon President Roosevelt to state his position on a third term, declaring that such an announcement was of "vital concern to the Democratic party and to the country alike."

Senator George pointed out that unless the President committed himself soon on his 1940 intentions the selection of convention delegates would be made blindly so far as "the rank and file are concerned."

Such a situation, the senior senator from Georgia said, would lead to confusion which would not be good for either the party or the country.

Both Factions Await.

Both the conservatives and the New Deal element would welcome an early statement by the President, Senator George said.

He explained that if the President's position is not stated until the convention, it is highly unlikely that conservatives and New Dealers will agree on a sudden selection of delegates.

George's statement was similar to that of Senator Wheeler, of Montana, last week. Senator Wheeler said that for the sake of the party, the President should declare his intentions.

President Roosevelt was unsuccessful in the summer of 1938 in his attempt to purge Senator George in Georgia's senatorial election. Since that time, however, the relations between the senator and the President have become more friendly.

Following is the complete text of George's statement on the third-term question:

"With the meeting of the National Democratic committee just ahead, a positive declaration by President Roosevelt of his position in the 1940 campaign is of vital concern to the Democratic party and to the country alike."

"Blind Selection."

"In the absence of such a clear declaration the selection of delegates will be made blindly so far as the rank and file are concerned. Confusion will follow and confusion can lead to nothing good to the party or to the country."

"Both the conservatives and the New Deal element in the party should desire the early explicit statement of the President setting forth his position."

"If the cards are not placed on the table until the national convention is at hand, it is unlikely that a sudden selection of candidates can be made upon which

Americans With Finns Don Uniforms, Get War Status

AT THE AMERICAN BARACKS IN NORTHWEST FINLAND, Jan. 30.—(AP)—United States volunteers in Finland today attained full legion status when they shed civilian dress and donned distinctive new uniforms of dark—almost black—gray—wool.

The only markings are cloth insignia of red and blue on either side of the collar. White may be impressed on these to complete the American color scheme.

A short dark overcoat, knee-length ski boots, a light gray cap and belt for weapons and a white snow cape complete the outfit.

All day today the Legionnaires' own tailors fitted the uniforms to the obviously pleased soldiers.

The Americans are mostly of Finnish descent and anxious to leave for the firing line. Training, however, may keep them in barracks for weeks. Small groups of new arrivals come in constantly.

Several American women also are here to join nursing troops.

Mechanics, aviators and artillery experts received commissions in the Finnish army almost immediately upon arrival. One aviator from New York, with 2,000 hours to his credit, already is reported to have shot down two Soviet planes.

About half the Americans now here participated in the war for Finnish independence 20 years ago.

Spalding Describes Trip As an Endurance Contest

Jack Spalding says the trip up the river is becoming an endurance contest and the plumbing is out of sorts. The Latins suffer well, shrug and say calmly, "Nothing we can do," then jump into a frenzied bingo game.

S. S. MONSERRATE, BETWEEN BARRANQUILLA AND PUERTO SALGAR, Colombia, Tuesday, Jan. 17.—(By Mail)—Fifth day. Late this afternoon we limped into Barranca.

The river has been falling rapidly. Sand bars rise five and six feet above the stream, their soft banks crumbling in the current. Proceeding by inches, the Monserrate has managed to plow about 20 miles upstream in the last 24 hours.

At Barranca, North and South America collide. In one end of the town the Tropical Oil Company refines petroleum from its wells located a few miles back from the river. The oil is then pumped to the sea at Cartagena. Adjoining the oil company's property is a Colombian river port.

The oil company's side of Barranca is a slice of North America set down in the midst of, and carefully protected from the disorder of the tropical south. The high wire fences that bound the company's property are lines of demarcation between two civilizations.

POOR HEALTH HELD RESPONSIBLE FOR SCHOOL FAILURES

Conference Also Shown Tie-Up Between Crop Losses and Hookworm, Malaria and Typhoid.

Those little Georgia boys and girls who are flunking the first grade and having to repeat it are costing the state of Georgia $4,000,000 a year—and its mostly the fault of inadequate public health work, Richard C. Job, director of the State Planning Board, declared yesterday as representatives of local governments and public and private agencies sat down to determine the ways in which WPA funds can best be utilized to give Georgians full advantage of its human and cultural resources.

Poor crop yields in rich soil areas in many Georgia communities were also laid at the door of poor health by the planning board director.

Job and Lawrence S. Morris, of Washington, D. C., assistant director of the community service projects section of the WPA, were principal speakers at the conference at the Piedmont hotel yesterday. Morris urged greater initiative on the part of local WPA sponsors in discovering Georgia needs and using the resources of the WPA in meeting them.

Job stressed particularly the need for more health work throughout the state. The planning board, he said, discovered that a crop yield map made by the board disclosed many of the richest farming sections are producing crop yields far below the average.

When a map of health conditions in the state was compared with the crop yield map, the result showed the prevalence of one or more diseases, such as malaria, typhoid, tuberculosis or hookworm in the rich areas with low crop yields.

He emphasized that increased health promotion is of vital importance among school children. Job cited the figures of the State Department of Education which revealed approximately 106,000 children have to repeat the first grade alone, with the estimated cost of such repetition set at $4,000,000 annually.

Atlantans Brave Chilly Weather To Attend Polio Benefit Dances on F. D. R. Birthday

Hundreds of couples braved a cold, icy wind and what remained of Atlanta's record snow last night to attend the birthday parties staged in Atlanta in honor of President Roosevelt. Funds derived from the dances will be used to fight infantile paralysis. Here is a part of the crowd that filled the ballroom of a downtown hotel.

"It (the celebration) is an expression of our greatest political asset—the enormous fund of tolerance, good will, good humor and simple human kindness which underlies our public life.

"Here is no trace of partisanship, no taint of social disunity, of economic controversy."

"In sending a dime . . . and in dancing that others may walk, we, the people, are striking a powerful blow in defense of American freedom and human decency."

The President also quoted a note from "a very old friend" which he said, "embodied a new and, I think, a very useful thought."

The friend said the purpose of the celebration "has a profound symbolism, for in a way we are all crippled children."

It added in explanation that "We . . . are so often unhumorously immature and unequal to the tasks our times impose upon us."

The President commented: "Today I think the nation as a whole is aware of and awake to the source of infantile paralysis. To minimize its effects, to drive it out entirely in the long run, is, as you know, our primary purpose."

"But as the years go on I hope that these annual celebrations will extend that task to the care of all crippled children, no matter what the cause of their crippling."

Two Parties for F. D. R. Although he stayed at home tonight, as usual, while Mrs. Roosevelt made the rounds of six Washington balls, the President had not one, but two, parties of his own in the White House.

Postponing all official engagements and his Tuesday press conference, he personally presided over a stage, screen and radio stars who

The man with the clarinet lifted his head proudly and deftly entwined a hot chorus around the smooth, whining accompaniment of the saxophones. Trumpets blared and trombones moaned. The man at the drums did his best to keep from falling out of his chair as he jumped up and down, waving his arms and producing staccato noises that sounded like a machine gun.

As the orchestra beat out measure after measure of popular tunes, couples swayed back and forth across the dance floor. They laughed and looked as if they were enjoying the hot clarinet chorus and the acrobatics of the drummer man.

Happy in Good Cause

They were happy because they knew their dancing was helping a great cause. Their dollars would go to help some little boy or girl with a twisted body fight his way back to health.

This might have been a scene at any one of the five parties which last night celebrated President Roosevelt's birthday. They were all much the same. Folks were having fun and the money they were paying to have it was going to fight infantile paralysis.

The dances were well attended despite the cold weather. They were slow getting started, but the couples kept on coming. They danced until well after midnight. Judy O'Grady—Colonel's Lady.

came here to entertain at six dances and three shows.

23 Guests at Dinner. Guests at the President's birthday dinner numbered 23 and included, besides White House attaches: James Roosevelt, his eldest son; Hall Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt's brother; Judge Samuel Rosenman, a former Roosevelt associate; Kirke Simpson, Charles McCarthy, James P. Sullivan, Secretary Hopkins, Stanley Prensoli, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. David Gray, and Basil O'Connor, former law partner of the President.

Movie Stars Present. At the luncheon were local birthday celebration officials. White House staff members and other guests: Gene Autry, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. James Cagney, Olivia De Havilland, Edward Everett Horton, Mary Howard, Gloria Jean, Brenda Joyce, Kay Kyser, Dorothy Lamour, Elsa Lanchester, Ona Munson, Mr. and Mrs. Pat O'Brien, Walter O'Keefe, Tyrone Power, Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Robinson, Mickey Rooney, Virginia Simms and "Red" Skelton.

Mr. and Mrs. John Roosevelt, the President's son and daughter-in-law, were among those leading the grand march at a Boston dance last night. At Calais, Maine, also last night, Premier Allison A. Dyrast, of New Brunswick, Canada, crossed the international border to join Governor Barrows, of Maine, at a benefit.

dinner to "L. B." and Merry, he saw them retire to a bedroom where he served them drinks. "He had coat off, shirt on," the butler said. "Later he carried her to couch in living room. This time he had shirt off. She was in transparent pajamas with top pulled down."

While Merry blandly toyed with a long cigarette holder—a picture of unconcern in a mink coat and wide-brim hat—Lukban continued, testifying that he saw her in bed with Griswold during a Washington birthday tete-a-tete.

"She had nightgown on and he had nothing on. I served them breakfast," the witness said.

Remembers Rendezvous. Lukban said he particularly remembered a rendezvous of Merry and Pickering last March 17 "because it is big day in my religion—you know, St. Patrick's Day," he added.

Mr. Pickering ordered me to bring food to his suite at the Delmonico hotel. I served supper to Mr. Pickering and Mrs. Cassini. He had pajamas. She had nightgown.

"Next day I went back to pick up the dishes. Mr. Pickering opened the door. He had pajama top, nothing else. Mrs. Cassini was sprawled across bed. She had pajamas on. She was yawning."

Lukban also remembered another alleged extramarital interlude on Army Day.

"I served supper and the next day when I came for dishes, Mr. Pickering was sitting on bed in shirt. She was between the sheets."

The butler acknowledged that he had been discharged last May 9, but said he had "nothing against Mrs. Cassini—she's just like kind. Very irresponsible."

The jitterbugs were on hand last night at Atlanta's five parties celebrating President Roosevelt's birthday. They contributed action to the happy throngs that danced until well past midnight for the benefit of the Fight Infantile Paralysis campaign. Here are two members of the jitterbug fraternity putting on an exhibition for the benefit of the crowd.

Shift Birthday To Summertime, President Urged

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Jan. 30. It has been so cold in Warm Springs—a paradox, albeit—that Editor Edward Stout of the Warm Springs Mirror has suggested the President change his birthday to a warmer month.

In a letter to Neighbor Roosevelt he cited the well-remembered Thanksgiving change.

"Move it up a few months, until June, maybe," he wrote. "I don't believe it would be any more trouble than the Thanksgiving shift."

If a "Fight Paralysis Week" was observed in the good old summertime, he argued, the rest would obviously be more effective.

N. B.—Editor Stout overlooked the possibility of a Presidential proclamation shifting January to a warmer season.

plane exploratory tour to determine southern sentiment.

He had visited Charlotte the previous day, and left here for Montgomery, with the purpose of continuing on to New Orleans, Little Rock, Memphis, Jacksonville, Raleigh and Columbia. The site and meeting date are yet to be fixed.

"A sense of responsibility toward America dictates this step," Mr. Williams declared. "We expect to be the majority party next year, and want all the information we can get. We are asking for sincere co-operation in a sincere effort to obtain the southern farm picture."

The investigators will be paying their own way, he declared. All are members of the Republican congressional agricultural committee formed some time ago by Representative Joe Martin, Republican leader in the house.

Although without specific title, Mr. Williams is regarded as very close to John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican national committee, and was active in the Chicago headquarters during the 1936 campaign. While he has a residence near Decatur, his home really is in Washington, he said. He visited Josiah T. Rose, former collector of internal revenue, while here.

"The south is going to find that the chairman of the cotton subcommittee, of the visiting group, is a real cotton expert," Mr. Williams added. "He knows the whole situation, and especially the cotton export situation, which is vital to the south."

This reference was to Representative Fred L. Crawford, of Michigan. Other crops with which the investigation will be concerned include citrus, vegetable oils, tobacco, peanuts and truck, and also the livestock industry.

The group will be continuing investigations made of farm production in the west. It is headed by Representative Clifford R. Hope, of Kansas.

RUSSO-JAPANESE BOUNDARY PARLEY IS ABANDONED

Mixed Commission Quits in Disagreement on Exact Line Between Siberia and Manchoukuo.

TOKYO, Jan. 31.—(Wednesday) (P)—A complete disagreement in the mixed commission organized to examine the boundaries of Siberia, Manchoukuo and Mongolia, which long has disturbed relations between Japan and Russia, was announced today by Yakihiro Suma, foreign office spokesman.

Suma said the commission had disbanded.

A telegram which arrived at the foreign office during a press conference merely stated that both sides had signed a declaration of their intention to abandon the proceedings.

"They found it impossible to reach an agreement," Suma said. A communique giving details was expected later.

The boundary dispute produced four serious military clashes between Japanese and Russian troops, culminating in battles at Changkufeng in 1938 and Nomonhan in 1939.

Power Paralysis Threatens Tokyo

TOKYO, Jan. 31.—(Wednesday) (P)—Japan's "power holiday," which began Tuesday in the Osaka region, throwing millions of employees out of work, threatened today to spread its industrial paralysis to Tokyo and Yokohama, second largest industrial district of the empire.

The shutdown of electricity was put into effect as a drastic means of conserving coal and power.

The press reported that the power shutdown would be applied in Tokyo and Yokohama for one week probably beginning Thursday.

These reports said the closure would be enforced on all large and small factories and shops engaged in urgent wartime manufacturing and the most necessary public utilities and communication facilities.

Shipbuilding, machinery manufacturing, automobile, rubber and toy factories are expected to be affected, and possibly commercial aircraft plants.

FIGHT PROMISED ALLIES BY HITLER

were charged by the Fuehrer with an avid desire to break up Germany into bits, to "pulverize" it, and, without partiality, Hitler promised "England and France" retribution.

His voice quivered, then rose to a high pitch as he told how Germany's enemies at home had gotten the war which "they wanted." Then he threatened:

"In 1939 the western powers dropped the mask and sent Germany a declaration of war despite all our attempts at an understanding. Today they adopt an understanding with Poland might have been possible but they didn't want it. They wanted war. I can only tell England and France, 'They'll get their fight!'"

Reception "Jammed."

A cascade of heels rolled through the great hall.

(Short-wave reception of the speech in the United States was interrupted frequently by mechanical noises. Engineers of WOR, Newark, said they believed this was the result of "deliberate jamming" from some unknown source.)

Hitler was bitterest toward "Old Mr. Chamberlain," Churchill and the English, but Daladier and the French were not spared.

"Monsieur Daladier," he cried, referring to the French premier's contention that Germany was not united, "my native land (Austria) was cited and pitied. Oh, Monsieur Daladier! You're going to get to

Women Used as Shields By Russians, White Told

By WILLIAM L. WHITE,
Special Correspondent.

SOMEWHERE IN FINLAND—(By Mail)—So here we were, about to hear the story of the Russian women being driven in between the front lines by Russian soldiers. That is, if the Finnish officer who had seen it would manage to crawl back to our camp through the cold.

A little wood-burning camp stove made it warm enough inside the tent, so we could take off our gloves, and we rested with the battalion staff, heads propped against our gas masks. There was a small hole in the tent wall, and the cold wind came through it in gusts. The battalion officers said a piece of shrapnel had tore it.

yesterday. They had not had time, they said, to mend it. Everybody else was too tired to talk.

So we lay there, listening to the shrapnel, which was a continuous rising and falling roar of thunder, and to the machine guns which were only about a hundred yards away. The sound of the machine guns rattling sticks along a wooden palisade fence. Twice the field telephone rang and the major answered and spoke, in Finnish, in a very alert, sharp tone.

Each time he hung up he would rest his cheeks on the palms of his hands—his elbows were on the pine table—with his eyes closed. The battalion staff slept, we listened to machine guns for a while and the telephone rang again.

Captain Tels Story.

This time he told us that the outpost had called in to say it would take the captain at least an hour or more to get in. Since we could not wait that long he would tell us the story himself.

He said the captain was a most reliable man, in civil life a chemical engineer and not given to seeing ghosts. Morning before last, the captain had first heard voices know my Ostmark (Austrians). You're going to make their acquaintance as you will that of the others, Herr Daladier. They all will show that the time aren't any individual German tribes any longer, Herr Daladier. The whole German people rises against you!"

"England Being Repaid."

England, he told "Old Mr. Chamberlain," is being repaid in the terms of her own past history.

Of Winston Churchill: "Churchill is burning to start the second round of waging war is that of going to war against women and children. I wonder whether they think Germany has been asleep?"

He answered Churchill's recent declarations that Germany, by early inaction, had lost its chance for winning the war.

Of Italy, the Fuehrer said: "For years Germany has pursued a common policy with Italy. This policy has not changed. Both states are intimate friends. Their common interests can be reduced to a common denominator."

As to Russia.

Of Russia, and Germany's new partnership with her peace-time enemy of years.

"For the past year I have tried to remove the possibility of England expanding this war into a general one. Chamberlain then was anxious for an understanding with Russia. Today our enemies are furious that I did what they attempted, namely, to arrive at that understanding. I believe the Almighty God will be satisfied that a senseless conflict in one area was averted."

"Through centuries Germany and Russia were friends—why not now?"

"Again he referred to France: 'In England and France the leading classes were determined to fight when the moment of Germany's resurgence came. England has always followed the aim of preventing the consolidation of Europe, just as France for centuries prevented the consolidation of Germany.'"

Seeks to Spur People.

Hitler made no reference to specific war aims. He did not predict the next development in the war and he made no forecast of the duration of the conflict.

In general, his address was regarded as an effort to spur the German people to new sacrifices. The great crowd in the Sports Palace responded in full measure to his stirring appeals.

The Fuehrer spoke for an hour and four minutes, beginning at 8:05 p. m. (2:04 p. m., Atlanta time). He was preceded briefly by Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, the Nazi minister of propaganda. Dr. Goebbels told Hitler the nation was united firmly behind him.

Impartial Attack Cited by British

LONDON, Jan. 30.—(P)—British spokesmen said tonight that Adolf Hitler's Sports Palace speech showed that the German Fuehrer at long last had given up hope of separating Great Britain and France.

An authoritative British statement, noting that Hitler attacked Britain and France without much distinction, added: "At last he has learned the folly of his previous efforts to separate France from her ally in order to destroy each of them singly and at his leisure."

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain will have a chance to answer Hitler tomorrow when he speaks at 1:15 p. m. (7:15 a. m., Atlanta time) at a luncheon to boost the sale of war savings certificates.

France Calm In Indifference

PARIS, Jan. 30.—(P)—Adolf Hitler's anniversary speech was received in Paris semi-official circles tonight with "calm indifference."

The Fuehrer's declarations, they said, displayed "neither any new argument nor any new indication" of what he intends to do.

of women, cries coming out of the woods where the Russians were, which was remarkable because that area had been completely evacuated for miles around—down to the smaller farm-house—before the Finns withdrew.

About an hour later the captain had plainly seen the women themselves—there was no doubt of it for they were less than a hundred meters away—about 14 of them, but he should not make too much of this, or say the captain had seen more than he really had.

There were Russian soldiers walking right behind the women and they were all coming toward the Finnish machine guns. The Russian soldiers had their bayonets fixed, but we must not make too much of this because all soldiers at the front have bayonets fixed.

Women's Identity Unknown.

No, the captain could not tell what language the women were talking because he was too far away to make out words, although the sound of women's voices was plain. But the major doubted that they could be Finnish, because the evacuation had been absolutely complete.

Polish? Perhaps. Perhaps Russian? Maybe the wives of workers in Leningrad who had grumbled against the regime being sent forward as a shield? Maybe women political workers going ahead of the troops to shame them for cowardice?

To all of these the major shook his head. He would not say what he did not know. All he knew was that his most reliable, clear-headed captain had seen women going ahead of Russian troops toward the Finnish lines, and heard plainly women's cries.

What became of them? The major did not know that, either, because the captain reported they had gone out of sight over a little hill. And we journalists should make nothing more out of this than the captain had actually seen. So, there's the story.

RUMANIA MASSES 2,000,000 TROOPS

porting more oil to Germany has been that she needs almost her entire transportation facilities for movement of troops and war materials.

Diplomats expressed surprise today at disclosure that Rumania has exported less than 30,000 tons of oil to Germany during January as against her promise of 130,000 tons.

The military measures were described as the most far-reaching of any taken since March, 1939, when Rumania felt herself threatened by Hungary's territorial demands and concentrated large forces along the eastern border, especially in Transylvania.

Men being called up now for auxiliary military service include veterans who fought in the Balkan war of 1913, it was said, and men of other classes who had thought they would be exempt because of age or family responsibilities have been ordered under arms.

At present, it was said, more than 1,500,000 men are under arms. Most of these men are busy completing the new chain of fortifications built in recent months to challenge the advance of any invader. These defenses are particularly heavy along the Russian and Hungarian borders.

Red Warships Hit By Italian Airmen

HELSINKI, Jan. 30.—(UP)—Italian volunteer airmen flying streamlined Savoia-Marchetti bombers were reported tonight to have bombed the big Russian naval base of Kronstadt and scored direct hits on several Russian warships, buildings and airplane hangers. Many of the Italians were reported veterans of the civil war in Spain.

The communique also announced that 21 Russian planes were shot down in air battles and by anti-aircraft fire in yesterday's aerial attacks on southern Finland which killed and wounded at least 183 persons, mostly civilians.

On the fighting from northeast of Lake Ladoga, the communique said, fresh enemy assaults in the Russians' 10-day-old attempt to outflank the Mannerheim line were thrown back and "heavy casualties" were inflicted on the Russians.

The Russians again attempted to storm across the ice near the eastern shore of Lake Ladoga and silence the guns of Finland's Mantsi fortress which have been holding two Russian divisions in a triangular pocket of murderous fire deep behind the Soviet lines.

fort, supported by planes and artillery, was repulsed after the Russians had sent several waves of infantry across the ice, it was said.

Official sources asserted that the Russian fliers had bombed a Finnish hospital train bearing 300 wounded soldiers and marked with Red Crosses 10 feet across. The bombs missed the train, it was said, but some machine-gun bullets pierced the cars without causing casualties.

In addition to the reported air bombing of the Kronstadt naval base by Italian pilots and planes, tonight's communique announced the bombing Monday of "certain railway stations" of the enemy.

Informal quarters said these stations were behind the Russian lines on the Karelian isthmus, along communications lines serving the Russian forces hammering at the Mannerheim Line.

Raid Rail Stations.

The fliers who bombed Kronstadt were said to have dumped the remainder of their bombs on the railroad stations on their return flight.

Other Finnish planes, their pilots including Swedish and Italian volunteers, were reported to have bombed military objectives along Russia's 900-mile-long railroad from Leningrad to Murmansk, particularly in the vicinity of the army's Kandalaksha base at the head of the White sea.

Japan Stiffens Her Demands

TOKYO, Jan. 30.—(P)—Japan stiffened her stand against Britain today in their dispute over the seizure of 21 Germans from the Japanese liner Asama Maru by notifying the British ambassador that return of the Germans to Japanese custody was "essential."

Previously Japan merely had "reserved the right" to demand their return, thus leaving an exit by which a diplomatic clash might be avoided. Diplomats expressed belief that today's notification changed the situation.

The foreign office announced that Foreign Minister Hiroshi Arima informed British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie of Japan's attitude today at a two and one-half-hour conference in which "every angle" of the case was discussed. Craigie and Arima will meet again tomorrow.

U. S. Warplanes Near Finland

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(P)—Eleven American pursuit planes, fully armed and equipped with the latest devices for aerial warfare, have arrived at Bergen, Norway, en route to embattled Finland, the Moore-McCormack lines said today.

Commander Robert C. Lee, vice president of the line, said more than 200 crates containing planes, ammunition, guns and other military equipment had reached Bergen on the freighter Mormacette. Other equipment is en route, he said.

20 Nazi Planes Punish Shipping

LONDON, Jan. 30.—(P)—Nazi bombing planes blasted at Britain's vital east coast sea lanes from one end of the island to another today with punishing attacks on merchant shipping for the second successive day. The two days of aerial assault have seen more than 20 British and neutral ships under attack.

Apparently seeking to establish a bomb blockade of England in retaliation for Britain's relentless sea blockade of the Reich, the German war machine braved stormy skies and British fighting planes to swoop low over the coast in their attacks.

At least 20 Nazi bombers flew in towards the coast in search of merchant ships today, a statement issued in London declared.

"Knowing that Europe was in the grip of the severest winter for 46 years the German air staff had no doubt assumed Great Britain's fighter force would be immobilized," the statement said, "but from Aberdeen to the Kentish

Prefer Chamberlain Easing of Blackout Favored By English, Gallup Finds

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 30.—British public opinion on vital war issues and political questions is being regularly measured and reported without interference in England today. Despite wartime conditions, the British Institute of Public Opinion, affiliate of the American Institute, has conducted surveys on many of the most controversial issues connected with the war, and the results have been published without censorship even when they showed a sharp division of sentiment.

So far as is known, this is the first time in history when public opinion has been freely measured and reported in a nation during wartime.

The most recent study deals with the public's attitude toward Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, who is responsible for the conduct of England's war at sea. With some elements favoring the elevation of Mr. Churchill to the Prime Ministership, displacing Neville Chamberlain, the British Institute put this question to a cross-section of voters in England, Wales and Scotland:

"If you had the choice between Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Churchill, which would you have as Prime Minister?"

The results show a majority in favor of keeping Chamberlain in office.

To test the public attitude toward the blackout, the British Institute asked voters in a recent survey:

"Are you in favor of the blackout being made less strict?"

coast fighter command patrols were ready to drive off the German raiders."

The Royal Air force reported one Heinkel bomber was shot down and another chased out to sea, damaged.

Two Nazi raiders flew so low over the northeast coast of Scotland that one just missed a church spire.

A third whirled twice around a Kent lighthouse so close that the keeper could see the crew.

At Yarmouth, scores of crowds watched a Nazi bomber loose charges at a patrol ship in the harbor which hastily slipped anchor and zigzagged out into the roadstead while plumes of water rose on each side.

The concussion rattled windows on shore.

Radio-listeners heard a dramatic SOS from the 901-ton British freighter Jersey Queen. An agitated voice reported she was being bombed, then the sentence was broken by the sound of shellfire. British fighters hurried to her aid.

Private Loans Urged for Finns

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(P)—Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, a powerful member of the senate foreign relations committee, tonight announced that he was opposed to government loans to Finland or other warring nations because the United States is in "no financial condition" to make such loans.

Another reason for his unqualified opposition, he said in a statement, was that the question of neutrality also was involved.

He said he would vote in the committee against reporting legislation by Senator Brown, Democrat, Michigan, to increase by $100,000,000 the capitalization of the Export-Import Bank to permit a non-military loan of not more than $20,000,000 each to Finland and other prospective borrowers. The committee will consider the bill tomorrow, approved last week by the senate banking committee by a vote of 18 to 2. As an alternative to government loans, Harrison suggested that Finland ask permission of the securities commission to sell its government bonds in the United States. He declined to pass on the value of such an investment, saying:

"I am not an investor. It is a good way for the American people to express their sympathy."

If the bonds proved to be worthless, he added, investors could deduct their losses from their income taxes.

Meat Deliveries Halted in Britain

LONDON, Jan. 30.—(P)—Britons faced curtailed food and fuel supplies tonight as the worst winter in 46 years continued to disrupt transportation facilities.

The traffic tie-up halted meat deliveries in some districts and butchers were forced to close shops.

Housewives lined up outside Lancaster stores to buy bread and other food supplies which were running low. Bakers there said their stocks probably would be exhausted tomorrow because of a shortage of yeast.

The government informed householders that deliveries of coal would be restricted to 224 pounds weekly and warned them to use gas and electricity sparingly.

Meat Deliveries Halted in Britain

LONDON, Jan. 30.—(P)—Britons faced curtailed food and fuel supplies tonight as the worst winter in 46 years continued to disrupt transportation facilities.

The traffic tie-up halted meat deliveries in some districts and butchers were forced to close shops.

Housewives lined up outside Lancaster stores to buy bread and other food supplies which were running low. Bakers there said their stocks probably would be exhausted tomorrow because of a shortage of yeast.

The government informed householders that deliveries of coal would be restricted to 224 pounds weekly and warned them to use gas and electricity sparingly.

WILL HITLER HAVE A FATAL "ACCIDENT"?

"Dies ist ein grosses geschichtliches Ereignis"
—Adolf Hitler

Germany's Fuehrer nearing the end of his reign? Was the Munich explosion the "handwriting on the wall"? In the blacked-out capitals of Europe these days, the men in the know are whispering strange predictions. . . . One of the foremost of these men is Henry C. Wolfe, the noted foreign correspondent who forecast the Hitler-Stalin alliance, while those two gentlemen were still shouting epithets at each other. THIS WEEK MAGAZINE has asked Mr. Wolfe to bring you his inside view of the war's next big development—and the result is a story that surpasses anything yet in surprises. . . . It's coming in THIS WEEK Sunday. Don't miss it!

COMMISSION GIVES ITS TENTATIVE NOD TO SANITARY TAX

30-Day Garbage Collecting Experiment in Lakewood Heights Section Is Ordered by Officials.

Approximately 7,000 Fulton county residents who use the facilities of the metropolitan sewer system will have added to their 1940 tax bill a sanitary tax under plans initiated by the county commissioners yesterday. Several grand juries have recommended the sewer tax.

Meeting in special session, the commission by a two-to-one vote tentatively approved a sanitary tax proposal drafted by the county legal department. Final action was postponed until all members of the board were in attendance.

Hailey Votes "No"
County Commissioner I. Gloer Hailey voted against the motion on the grounds that he had not had time to study the new tax set-up.

The commissioners also approved in effect the establishment of a county system of garbage collection and ordered the sanitary and health departments to make a 30-day experiment in the Lakewood Heights section for the purpose of determining the cost and best method of operation. The experiment will be made at no cost to residents of that section.

The proposed sanitary tax provides that the county shall abolish the present sewer tapping fees and in its place, levy an annual tax of 75 cents for each sanitary appliance connected directly or indirectly with the sewer, or a minimum of $3 a year.

Lists Appliances
Harold Sheats, assistant county attorney, listed sanitary appliances as bath tubs, sinks, toilets and wash basins.

He estimated that the average amount of the tax per family would be from $5 to $6 annually. In discussing the garbage collection program, Sheats said the cost would average about $8 per year per family. A special tax will be levied to meet the cost, he said, if the plans materialize.

Private companies are now collecting garbage in Fulton county outside of the city at a cost of from $12 to $18 per year, he said.

Sewer Tax
The sewer tax will be for payment of disposal costs. This year the county will pay approximately $50,000 for this service, the commissioners pointed out. Sheats said approximately 1,000 property owners who have paid the $50 tapping fee will be exempt from paying the new tax until the amount of their tapping fee has been used up in assessments.

In order to make the tax operative this year, the board ordered Sheats to confer with Guy A. Moore, county tax receiver, and instruct him to get from each taxpayer who files a return the number of sanitary appliances in the property being listed for taxation.

LABOR ELECTION ORDERED BY NLRB

Pipe Workers To Choose Between CIO and AFL.

An election to determine whether employees of the United States Pipe and Foundry Company of Bessemer, Ala., want to bargain through the CIO or the AFL was ordered yesterday in Atlanta by the National Labor Relations board.

The Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, a CIO affiliate, petitioned for an election to decide bargaining representation and five craft unions affiliated with the AFL intervened to contend the bargaining unit should be a craft group rather than an industrial unit. The NLRB ordered the vote within 30 days.

State Payments to Teachers Total $6,201,784.

Checks to 35 state public school systems were mailed yesterday, from which counties will pay teachers' salaries for the fifth month. A total of $172,517.99 was involved.

Payments yesterday to teachers brings the five months' total salary payment to $6,201,784.20, which is only approximately $600,000 short of total payments for the whole of last school year — $6,832,200.

HANDRICK DEFENSE ASKS JUDGE FOR DIRECTED VERDICT

State Ends Case Against Ex-County Welfare Supervisor Charged With Embezzlement of $900.

Judge Hugh M. Dorsey, of Fulton superior court, took under advisement yesterday a defense motion for a directed verdict in the case of Martin Handrick, former county welfare supervisor, who is on trial on a charge of embezzling $900 of welfare funds during July, August and September.

The motion, made by Attorney H. A. Allen, came late yesterday after the state had rested its case. Handrick formerly was supervisor of two shelter lodges which the welfare department operated for feeding of single men. The indictment charges him with embezzling $900 of the $1,500 which he drew on cash vouchers for supplies.

Lodge Manager Called. State witnesses yesterday included C. J. Fain, manager of the white shelter lodge on Rawson street; Robert Brown, cook at the white lodge; Ernest Hopson, cook at the Negro lodge; Frank Shirley, manager of the Surplus Commodity Administration, which furnished a large quantity of foodstuffs for the lodges; and H. H. Peoples, WPA farm manager, who was recalled to the stand.

The state, through several witnesses, sought to establish that approximately 55 gallons of syrup was used at the two lodges monthly, while Handrick reportedly had told the grand jury the large amount of cash was used to purchase about 300 gallons of syrup monthly.

Discrepancy Charged. Peoples testified that he sent to the two lodges during the months of July, August and September more than $1,200 worth of farm products and Shirley listed donations of food totaling $645 for the three-month period.

If Judge Dorsey decides against the directed verdict, the case will be resumed at 9 o'clock this morning with the defense presenting its case.

Plumber Shortage Reported As Public Seeks Pipe Repairs

Cold Wave Left Hundreds Without Water When Plumbing Froze; Citizens Asked 'To Grin and Bear' Until Service Reaches Them.

Atlanta was faced with the most distressing shortage of plumbers in many years last night as a new cold snap, which the weatherman said would be of short duration, moved into the city. A low of 24 degrees is predicted for this morning, accompanied by fair skies.

Hundreds of Atlantans, their water supply curtailed or completely shut off by burst and frozen pipes, clamored for plumbers which did not exist. Every available plumber in the city already is working night and day, E. Q. Quarles, city plumbing inspector, said.

City officials had little advice to offer worried Atlantans except "to grin and bear" their difficulties until they can get a plumber. During the emergency Quarles said the city was ignoring the regulation requiring plumbers to have a license before their work was passed.

Lenient on Licenses. "Anybody who can fix a pipe is going ahead and doing it," Quarles said. "Of course, we are not recommending such workmen, for that would be a violation of the law, but we are not enforcing the law to the letter during this crisis."

Quarles said there were approximately 450 regular plumbers in Atlanta, but he estimated there were at least 1,000 workmen trying to repair frozen pipes. The inspector pointed out that plumbing facilities had been taxed to the limit during the past two weeks. As soon as some pipes were fixed, he said, they burst again.

"This is just one of those situations which arise once in many years," Quarles said. "People will just have to be patient until the plumbers can get around to them."

Many Without Water. W. Zode Smith, manager of the city water works department, explained that many families are completely without water, while others are receiving their supply through one or two faucets. In many places, he said, water pipes are frozen all the way back to the city mains.

Quarles said he believed it would be impossible to bring in Edison Pleads With Congress Not To Slash Navy Expansion Plans.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Secretary Edison, pleading with congress not to slash the navy's $1,300,000,000 fleet expansion program, warned today that unless the United States is strong, its interests, liberties and wealth are "almost certain to be targets" of aggression.

It appeared, however, that the committee was bent on changing the $1,300,000,000, "six-year program" to a two-year plan totaling less than $750,000,000.

Chairman Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, told newsmen the committee would begin final consideration of the two-year building program tomorrow—providing for about 21 combatant ships instead of 17 as originally proposed.

"We're giving them all they can build in two years," he declared.

Senators Andrews and Pepper and the state's commission announced several federal agencies had started surveys of cold weather damage and had promised to give all financial aid possible to Florida growers. Senator Andrews said a conference with President Roosevelt would be made tomorrow.

Regional Director E. S. Morgan, of the Farm Security Administration, declared today "no farmer or farm workers will be allowed to go hungry" as the result of Florida freeze damage.

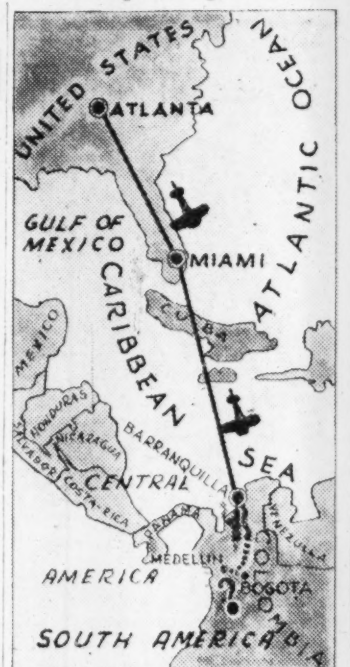

No Snow Flood, TVA Declares.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Jan. 30.—(AP)—The Tennessee valley Authority said today melting of heavy snows which fell throughout the valley would cause no flood problem.

A. S. Fry, chief of the hydrologic data division, said slowly changing temperatures would cause a slow clearance in the ice and snow.

Barrancas is obvious. And the fence is there to keep them apart. The fence is not only a tangible barrier but a symbolic of other barriers: of different languages and philosophies, of different ways of life and diverse aims.

Significantly, the Barranca inside the fence built the barrier and pays the men who guard its gates. But in spite of it, Barranca outside the fence has had its streets oiled by Barranca inside the fence. It is a lesson in Pan-American relations. There is still a lot to be done.

This morning, the voyage up the Magdalena turned into an endurance contest, the passengers united against the river, the heat, the mosquitoes and the steamer's plumbing.

We were scheduled to arrive in Puerto Salgar this morning. Yesterday we were told we might be two days late. We spent last night tied to the shore, and were told we might be six, seven, eight or nine days late. Quien sabe?

Temperamental Shower. For the last two days the water system has been decidedly temperamental. The passenger who wants a shower has an all day job on his hands.

Water is pumped from the river to two small tanks on the top deck where it is presumably filtered. Gravity is supposed to distribute it. But gravity is no match for the gummy sand that clogs the pipes and occasionally squirts through the faucets. The electric plant is equally erratic. In the heat of the day the fans stop. In the dark of the night the lights go off.

Dancing, Bingo. Every night there is dancing and bingo. Bingo on the Monserrate is not the anemic game of North American church bazaars. It is a frantic affair, a matter of life and death.

Three times a day the seven Sisters of Charity board kneel in their deck chairs and pray in unison, their faces to the wall. At night the Jimenez family gathers on the deck around their cigar smoking grandmother and says the rosary. Their friends kneel nearby and join them. At the same hour, Senora Arbelaez, the aunt of the Archbishop of Bogota, leads another rosary in pious competition. Because the archbishop is her nephew, she has a large following.

Colombians are a religious people, and we hope they are praying for rain.

Tomorrow Spalding tells of the Nazi stories circulating in South America and of the mystery of the missing plane, reputedly brought down near the Panama Canal with important pictures.

Auto License Deadline To Be Extended 15 Days

Governor Rivers, will issue a proclamation extending until February 15 the time for purchase of 1940 automobile license tags without payment of the penalty. The action probably will be taken today.

Rivers said yesterday that he would allow the recommendation of Revenue Commissioner T. Grady Head on the tag extension, adding that Head had indicated he would suggest the "reprieve" to tag buyers because of the slow movement of mail in north Georgia counties for the last week.

Head was out of the city yesterday, but his office said he planned to confer with the Governor today.

Governor Rivers said the state was anxious to get tax money collected as soon as possible, in order that proceeds from the sales might be used to finance WPA projects for relief purposes. Tag sales were considered brisk yesterday, although it was reported that only 30 per cent of the 400,000 tags had been sold.

TOWN IN MISSISSIPPI THREATENED BY FIRE

ABERDEEN, Miss., Jan. 30.—(AP)—The most disastrous fire in the history of Aberdeen today ate out a section of one of the main business blocks, and was subdued with the aid of fire departments from five near-by Mississippi cities.

A shift in the wind and quick arrival of emergency aid from other towns within a radius of 40 miles was all that kept the conflagration confined to one block, and saved buildings across the street from becoming engulfed in the flames—facing in 22-degree temperature.

New England Still Hard Hit

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—(AP)—New England's coldest January in 20 years drew to a close today with the coastguard struggling to keep shipping lane ice-free in the face of conditions reported as "growing worse" and with little immediate relief in sight.

Temperatures during the night dropped to below zero throughout most of the section's northern states, with Northfield, Vt., recording the lowest—16 below.

Florida To Debate Fruit Embargo

LAKELAND, Fla., Jan. 30.—(AP)—Florida's fruitmen will come here tomorrow from their recently frozen groves to debate the big question which always follows a severe cold wave—whether to place a ban on shipment of frost-affected citrus or allow current inspection regulation to stand unchanged.

If the state citrus commission, which will meet in special session, decides on an embargo it must give growers and packers at least 12 hours notice and the ban would not apply to any fruit already picked, packed, processed and inspected. The embargo may be for not more than seven days. The weather bureau forecasts above freezing temperatures for all parts of the peninsula and said citrus and truck crops would not be endangered further.

To Check Constipation
Get at Its Cause!

If constipation has you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey, it's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat the super-refined food most people eat, the chances are the difficulty is simple—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines. If this common form of constipation is your trouble, eat Kellogg's All- Bran regularly, and drink plenty of water. All- Bran isn't a medicine—it's a crunchy, toasted cereal. And it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

City, County Tax Books Will Open
Tomorrow for Property Returns

Attention, Atlanta and Fulton county taxpayers—

Tax books for both governments open tomorrow for real and personal property returns.

City books will close March 15, Joe C. Little, senior city assessor said, while Guy A. Moore, county tax receiver, said his books will remain open until May 1. After the closing dates, penalties will be assessed against those who failed to make returns within the stipulated time limit.

Offices at the courthouse and the city hall will be open from 8 o'clock until 4:30 o'clock each week day except Saturday, when they will close at 12:30 in the afternoon.

Moore also explained that all taxpayers who are entitled to real and personal property exemptions must claim them each year. Homestead exemptions must be claimed at the courthouse.

Taxpayers making both city and county returns should make the city returns first, he said.

of Cone will be another gesture toward George.

"Talmadge Apprehension." At the time MacDougall's appointment was announced, there was widespread discussion that the appointment was a Talmadge appeasement, some of this coming from the President's staunchest allies. Although MacDougall never shown much political activity and if he has been friendly to Talmadge, he did not make that friendliness effective in any of Talmadge's campaigns. At all odds, the MacDougall appointment didn't make Talmadge any madder at the New Deal.

The Cox appointment, of course, was a gesture toward Senator Russell as well as to Cox's horde of personal friends, many of whom had been outspoken against the President.

Now comes an appointment for Camp. Naturally it is a reward for the licking he took in 1938 from George and Talmadge. All factional leaders in the state are understood to have given their endorsement. Governor Rivers added his yesterday in a telegram to the President. Even Senator George has said that he will not oppose any appointment given Camp outside the state.

Camp's Successor. Next will be the appointment of Camp's successor and already several names are being heard. In the past, the office has been considered Senator Russell's patronage and there is nothing in view to indicate that it will be anything else this time, although it is understood that the junior senator will be asked to nominate someone who will meet the approval of all leaders such as did MacDougall.

Until a few months ago, Camp's first assistant was I. K. Hay, of Covington, and when there was talk immediately after the unsuccessful George purge that Camp would be placed on the bench it then was considered a foregone conclusion that Hay, who has been swinging on the Russell main gate ever since the junior senator built his first political fence, would get the district attorneyship. However, Hay since has taken a civil service post with the Interstate Commerce Commission. It pays well and his friends said yesterday he liked the work. His present headquarters are at Raleigh. It is certain that Hay will get consideration if he still wants the place.

Next there is the senator's younger brother, Robert Russell, a political leader in his own right, and to whom many give much of the credit for political successes of the Russell family. It is not even known that Bob Russell wants the job but it is generally known that he would be highly acceptable to practically all leaders in the event Brother Dick chose to recommend him and Brother Bob chose to accept.

Also there is Judge Clifford Pratt, likewise a resident of Windward, Judge Pratt stands high in the Russell councils, is generally acceptable and outstanding as a law-

PIONEER MUST STAY
IN BED ON BIRTHDAY

S. K. Austin Is Third Owner of Farm, Once Royal Grant.

A Henry county pioneer whose farm has had only two previous owners since the land was granted by the King of England will celebrate his 85th birthday today in the hospital.

He is S. K. Austin. His farm is situated 14 miles south of Decatur, near Stockbridge. Mr. Austin was taken ill January 16, and removed to Emory University hospital. An "open house" has been planned for him, but that had to be canceled because of his illness.

Mr. Austin was born on the historic farm and has lived there all his life. His father was the previous owner. He has been a reader of The Constitution ever since he can remember. Outstanding in civic and church work, Mr. Austin is the father of Miss Elmina Austin, of 1092 St. Augustine place, and B. K. Austin, of 584 Flat Shoals avenue.

WPA HIGHWAY JOBS
RUSHED FOR NEEDY

Atlanta-Marietta and Jonesboro Projects Will Be Launched Soon.

Two WPA highway projects—one the completion of the important four-lane Atlanta-Marietta route, will be launched as soon as possible to afford work and wages to approximately 500 needy Fulton county breadwinners, Robert L. MacDougall, Georgia Works Project administrator, announced yesterday.

The Marietta road project will be started February 5, if weather permits, MacDougall asserted as he mapped plans for putting more jobless men to work in an effort to relieve need and ease the strain on local relief agencies.

The other project to be undertaken as soon as possible is the widening, straightening and paving of the old Jonesboro highway, one section of the road being almost ready for the WPA crews to move in.

Both projects will furnish work for about 500 men. MacDougall said all labor will be taken from the waiting list of certified WPA applicants.

ATLANTA, GA., JANUARY 31, 1940.

Two Anniversaries

Two great nations yesterday celebrated, each of them, an anniversary. Each, considered the date important and worthy of emphasis. Each celebrated in manner perhaps apropos of the national character, yet there were never two celebrations more different in type.

In Germany, the Nazis celebrated the seventh anniversary of the day when Hitler ascended to absolute power in the German government. There was a speech by Dr. Fuehrer, and there was, too, an intensified air attack against British shipping. The planes rained death and destruction from the skies, in celebration of the Hitler-Nazi anniversary.

In the United States, the day marked the 58th birthday of President Roosevelt. There was a speech, in this country, too. A speech by President Roosevelt. There were celebrations in every city, town and crossroads hamlet. There were dances and parties and gatherings galore. And they were for the purpose of aiding in a war, not against fellow humans, but against a dread disease. While Germany boasted of triumphs in brutality, in horror and in destruction, America provided the financial sinews to continue a war of science against poliomyelitis, one of the worst of all diseases.

While German planes showered bombs to cripple and to kill, Americans showered dollars and dimes that the crippled might, some day, walk again in full enjoyment of abounding life.

There is something about the German national character that makes their celebration of their anniversary quite apropos. But there is something about American character that makes our celebration fitting, too.

Germany has, for many generations, glorified the militaristic spirit. Her people, under the Hohenzollerns, became used to the arrogance of Prussian army officers and grew to accept their own estimate of themselves as vastly superior creatures. For generations Germany has watched with approval the goose-stepping evolutions of her armed youth. The spirit of the goosestep, as well as the form, has infiltrated their souls.

Today the entire German nation is concentrated upon the making of war. They were told, and believed, that the pitiful destruction of such weaker neighbors as Czechoslovakia and Poland added glory to German arms and they have been trained, from childhood, in the theory there is no such thing as honor in war, that victory is the only glory.

It is, then, quite understandable that they should celebrate an anniversary, and find added reason for rejoicing, in new ruthlessness and wider death for the enemy.

But the national character of the United States is far different.

We are a nation of philanthropists. We are constantly giving that suffering, among our own or in some far corner of the world, may be assuaged. We are the greatest contributors, as a nation, to relief funds for all and sundry, to charity in every guise, to anything that holds out the promise of less suffering for anyone.

It is, therefore, but natural, when we would celebrate an anniversary, we do it by giving to some good cause. It is, we all know, peculiarly fitting that the cause should be the fight to conquer infantile paralysis, on Roosevelt's birthday.

So, we give and find our greater happiness, our highest satisfaction, in that giving. We feel we have done something worth while and we pray that our gifts may, some day, prove the means through which researchers, scientists and doctors shall discover the cause and cure of a disease that annually counts its victims by the thousands.

In this comparison may be found the clue to the future of both nations. For one, it is plain, is the agency of death, while the other, let us give thanks, seeks ever to be the instrument of better, freer, healthier and happier life.

A rumor is around that the Duke has become a sweet old character, and younger disciples will carry the torch. As to Adolf, though, there must be some other solution than time.

Festival at Athens

On Thursday and Friday of this week there will be held, at Athens, the annual music festival of the University of Georgia, given under the direction and sponsorship of the Department of Music. It will be an event of outstanding importance and charm for all musicians in Georgia who can find it possible to attend.

Featured on the program is the world-famous Roth String Quartet.

The Music Department at the University, under the direction of Hugh Hodgson, has achieved an enviable reputation, especially when it is known that paucity of funds has made impossible many of the more elaborate projects which the department would like to undertake.

The department has specialized in the broad field of music for everyone, seeking ever to develop the musical appreciation of the general public. It is in this work it has, perhaps, found its greatest opportunity and its greatest success.

The program for Thursday and Friday is one to delight everyone familiar with the beauty of chamber music. In addition there will be an art exhibit of paintings, presented by the Art Department at the University which is collaborating in the festival.

Moving Day Problem

Pittsburgh is seeking a solution to the moving day turmoil which annually besets not only that city but every other metropolis in the country. If successful, it may remove from the American scene one of its most colorful, yet annoying and expensive, events.

In Pittsburgh, moving day drops around on May 1, rather than on the first of September, which has become standardized in Atlanta. The Pittsburgh lease survey committee now is conducting a poll through the co-operation of newspapers, in which two questions are asked: (1) should leases be written to expire one year from the date of occupancy, rather than May 1; (2) should leases contain a 60-day cancellation clause, subject to payment of a penalty amounting to a fraction of the rent for the unexpired months of the lease?

Moving day has grown as an institution because it generally is a day more convenient for apartment and home owners, those who participate in the annual scramble, to move around into more comfortable, or more convenient, places of abode. Yet it is an extremely expensive and increasingly annoying habit, both for those who have to move and those who have to redecorate homes and apartments for new tenants over the span of a very few days. It creates a tremendous volume of work for painters and paperhangers and moving men—for a few days—where the work could be done over a period of time at more reasonable rates and to afford steadier employment.

Atlanta has followed this outmoded system for some years now, confronted with a moving day jam of vast proportions. It might be well to watch carefully the Pittsburgh experiment and to follow along in a more sensible arrangement of staggered leases, which would benefit all concerned and penalize few.

For Birth Control

Approval by 77 per cent of the voters, according to a recent survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion, better known as the Gallup Poll, of government birth control clinics reveals a rising tide of intelligent humanitarianism in this country. It is not more than two or three decades ago when it was illegal to distribute birth control literature and when anyone publicly advocating it became, thereby, a social pariah and the object of public opprobrium.

The Gallup Poll, of course, takes no sides on any public issue. Its sole function is to test the changing trends of public opinion and to make known its findings. It is as impersonal as any chemist analyzing the content of a test tube.

It is interesting to note that the proportion of voters in favor of birth control clinics has grown steadily since the first questionnaire on this subject was sent out. In 1936 the figure was 70 per cent; in 1937 it was 71 per cent; in 1938, 72 per cent, and, today, it is 77 per cent.

Birth control is a concomitant of the increasing independence of women. The day is fast passing when women can be considered as merely brood stock for the human race. Intelligent control of motherhood is essential if many women are not to be doomed to lifelong slavery to their families.

It is of special interest to the south to note that South Carolina is the first state to adopt a plan for birth control education as a regular part of its public health service. The south thus provides leadership in another movement designed for the emancipation of womanhood and for the improvement of the race of humans.

They say the solemn stillness lately from the direction of London was the new British minister of information, holding his first press conference.

Editorial of the Day

THE POPGUN PERIL

(From The St. Louis Post-Dispatch.)
Is law and order or world peace safeguarded by dumping a load of toy guns into the river? We're law-abiding and peace-loving, but we can't believe there will be any result from this action, just committed by order of the supervisor of the East St. Louis WPA toy shop, except disappointment among youngsters.

A make-believe gun is as much a part of boyhood's rightful treasures as a sled or a football, and about as malign an influence. We realize there is a nation-wide movement, led by perturbed worriers, to outlaw the popgun, and the charge is made that playing with toy weapons leads to a desire to handle the real thing. Well, probably every criminal did play with toy guns in youth, but so did virtually every bank president, pastor and philanthropist. So what? If sale or possession of a wooden pistol becomes a penal offense, there will be just that much more fun for Junior to carve one from a chunk of wood, as a goodly proportion are made, anyway.

Disarm the ancient game of cops and robbers? Sissy the pioneer sport of cowboys and Indians? Forbid youngsters to keep up with current events by re-enacting the wars their elders talk about? Let's be realistic and face the truth—crime waves and wars aren't caused by boys playing with toy guns. The sentimentalists will have to look further if they want to be constructive agencies rather than snail-sorts.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

DEWEY GROWS IN FAVOR WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Reports from New York indicate that Thomas E. Dewey's position in his own ballistics has improved significantly. Until lately Dewey was a prophet without honor among the homefolks, or at least among the much more important home politicians, most of whom detested him with a fine, grim fury. Now the memory of the young racket-buster's early arrogance is fading, while the thought is growing stronger that he may be the Republicans' best available presidential candidate.

Nevertheless, Dewey cannot count on the vital New York delegation to stick by him through a long convention fight. Upstate, as the Deweyites have always feared, Publisher Frank Gannett has announced his candidacy. He will probably take the handful of delegates controlled by the Rochester and Syracuse organizations. In New York city, meanwhile, able county leader Kenneth Simpson has just affirmed his control over the city delegation of 21, equivalent to the delegation of an average state.

Officially, Dewey is Simpson's candidate, but Simpson's private feelings towards Dewey are decidedly lukewarm. If Dewey is not nominated on an early ballot, Simpson may well have the power to put over another man by giving him the votes of Dewey's own New Yorkers.

TOM AND KEN The relations between Simpson and Dewey, as view. Politically, Dewey began as Simpson's protégé, being nominated for district attorney by Simpson's direct intervention, and subsequently elected by Simpson's much-denounced deal with the American Labor party. It may be that Simpson presumed too much on this relationship. At any rate, when he seemed about to involve Dewey in his quarrel with former President Herbert Hoover, Dewey publicly turned on him. Dewey also privately attempted to undermine his ally's county leadership.

For a time the war between the two men was pretty open. Then both realized that nothing was to be gained by it, and a sort of peace conference was held at Dewey's house. After dinner together, Simpson and Dewey talked until the milkmen were rattling their cans in the streets. The result was an agreement by which Dewey became New York's candidate, but promised to support Simpson as county leader and not to try to dominate the choice of New York county delegates. The delegates were to be Simpson's organization men for Dewey, rather than 100 per cent Deweyites.

Some time ago, however, there were signs that the Dewey camp did not propose to abide by the Dewey-Simpson agreement. George Z. Medaille, although strangely omitted from the announced membership of the Dewey brain trust, was Dewey's original adviser and is still extremely close to him. As the Hoover federal district attorney, Medaille has some standing among New York Republicans. A movement started to make him a delegate, over Simpson's opposition. In other districts besides Medaille's, similar movements for other 100 per cent Deweyites seemed to be afoot.

Simpson called Dewey, who denied any connection with these phenomena. Possibly Simpson was not entirely convinced. At any rate, he called in his district leaders and has now virtually completed the task of picking his slate of delegates. Medaille was excluded; such Simpson allies as Charles Hilles, Walter S. Mack, and Bruce Barton have prominent places, and among the 21 delegates about the only ones owing their allegiance to Dewey first and Simpson second will be Allen Dulles, brother of another Dewey brain trust, John Foster Dulles; Robert P. Lewis, and Sam Koenig, the old county leader deposed by Simpson.

OHIO'S FIFTY-TWO The contrast is striking between Dewey's position and that of his most active competitor, Senator Robert A. Taft. Taft also has had to contend with opposition from some home-state politicians, notably the influential and somewhat devious chairman of the Ohio state committee, Ed Schorr. Furthermore, Governor John Bricker has been a far more serious rival for Taft than Publisher Gannett has been for Dewey. Bricker is said to be newly active as a candidate, although he has formally withdrawn in Taft's favor. But Taft has so arranged matters on delegates that he has prominent places, and among the 21 delegates about the only ones owing their allegiance to Dewey first and Simpson second will be Allen Dulles, brother of another Dewey brain trust, John Foster Dulles; Robert P. Lewis, and Sam Koenig, the old county leader deposed by Simpson.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Touch

Of Memory.

In The Constitution of January 21 there was published a little story under a California date line.

It told of the death of Otis Harlan. That was all. There was no mention of the close relationship of Atlanta to Otis Harlan, no "local references." The new generation doesn't remember when Otis Harlan was so popular with Atlanta theatergoers.

However, among all whose memories must have responded to that little news item, was Lauren Foreman. It was in the years immediately succeeding 1902 that Otis Harlan was prominent in local affairs. He was the star of those days. Lauren Foreman was a cub reporter on The Constitution. He says himself he had just come from the country and from three years of study at Emory College in old Oxford, Ga. Under the circumstances he admits he was, perhaps, among the more impressionable of a theater audience, but nevertheless the impression made upon him by Harlan and his associates proved indelible for the young reporter.

The Wells-Dunne-Harlan Company began its local career in the summer of 1902. For several years thereafter they presented to Atlantans a series of plays and musical comedies. They played, first, at the old Grand and then at the Casino, in Ponce de Leon park, the site of which is now occupied by Sears-Roebuck Company.

They put on, here, those famous old Hoyt plays, including "A Mid-nite Bell," "A Trip to Chinatown," "A Texas Steer." We'd think them crude melodrama, but they drew the crowds then.

Orchestra

Leader.

The orchestra leader of that ancient repertoire company was Max Hoffman, who later made quite a reputation as a composer. Even then he had all Atlanta humming and whistling and singing his songs. Such as "Zulu Land," "Ching a Ling a Ling," etc. And Mrs. Hoffman, then just a member of the chorus, later made quite a reputation in New York and Paris.

Most of the comedy was handled by a team which later became nationally famous. "Little Chip" and Mary Marble. "Little Chip" had a real name, said to be Sam Cornbloom. Then, also in the company, were John W. Dunne, Dan Marble. And Otis Harlan.

Otis Harlan later starred in a number of successful productions on Broadway. He was quite an actor for his day and time.

Now, he is dead. And, outside of a few old-timers, even Atlanta scarcely remembers him. Ho, hum. Such is fame and popularity.

Former

Stars.

Every now or then a name leaps out of the "supporting cast," announced on the advance trailer of some picture production. Some name that awakens memories of many grand evenings spent in the legitimate theater.

None brings happier memories, though, than that of Richard Carle, who appears quite frequently, nowadays, in fairly decent parts.

Richard Carle used to be a musical comedy star in his own right. One of the best. With his own company, in shows that were written specially for him. The titles? Sho, I can't remember 'em now. But they were really good, and Carle himself was a swell comedian.

And do you remember when Irene Dunne was a light opera leading lady in Atlanta? She was. It was the first season of Municipal Light Opera. That year it was presented at the auditorium. Louise Hunter, perhaps the most popular of the "secondary" group of opera stars ever heard in Atlanta, was the first prima donna. She sang alternate weeks and, on the weeks when Louise wasn't in the cast, Irene was the star.

Wonder what has become of Louise Hunter? She was, beyond argument, "Atlanta's Sweetheart." Just about as good a Musette as ever appeared with the Metropolitan at the old auditorium, in Bohemian Nights. She was grand as the doll in Tales of Hoffman, too.

She sang light opera here for two summers. One at the auditorium and one at the Atlanta theater, when it was the top house. The third year the Erlanger was open, but they didn't have any more money to go on as a by then. Trying too hard to economize, I guess. Anyway, the third year was the year the project died.

First year they made a lot of money, but spent it so extravagantly on their productions they were left with the red at the close of the season.

The second year made money. Some day I'll tell you the story of Louise Hunter and the successful, yet highly uninformed impresario of second-rate road shows.

Louise, by the way, quit opera when she married. Her life has been good to her, since.

Twenty-Five

Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Sunday, January 31, 1915:

"A masked highwayman held up three men at the point of a pistol in Grant park about 12 o'clock last night, and obtained nearly $90."

And Fifty

Years Ago.

From the news columns of Friday, January 31, 1890:

"The machinery for the electric plant at Griffin has arrived in that city, and in ten days Griffin will be handsomely illuminated with electric lights."

An Obliging Fire.

Weber Rosenberg, University of Louisiana student, was driving home after a dance and discovered his automobile in flames.

He drove on a couple of blocks to an engine house, where he awakened a nodding fireman and told him his car was afire outside.

"Thanks for bringing the fire to me," said the fireman, dashing out with a hand extinguisher.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

'Share-the- NEW YORK. Worry' Plan. Jan. 30.—I suppose some people have been wondering where I learn so much about the military situation in the Far East.

What I do is listen to speeches at luncheons, read books and magazines and newspaper articles and talk up the subject among my friends. This scares the hell out of me, and I write a piece about it so that other people can help me fret. You might call it my share-the-worry plan.

It is the same about the military situation in Europe, but my information is strictly first-class, because it is compounded of all the best thoughts and fears on this subject. The facts are simple and well established, and most of the professional authorities use the same major premises but, for variety and what you might call customer appeal, approach the discussion first from one angle, then from another—the Mediterranean today, for example, then the Baltic and so forth.

Anyone who wants to become an authority may do so by listening to a few lectures, reading a few essays bearing such titles as "Whither French-Indo China?" Or "What Price Indo-Balkan Isolationism?" Interviewing some officers of the army and navy, preferably retired, and provoking casual discussions with non-professional friends who have obtained their knowledge the same way.

Acrobats

How does a person become an Acrobats? acrobat? The novice will take some terrible falls in learning, but polish comes with patient practice, and I took some myself in the field of foreign policy before I became an expert.

Now, however, I am pretty good, and anybody who says I am not pretty good is low-rating not only me, but some of the greatest experts in the world, because it is from them that I have learned my stuff. They are likely to be pretty foolish, however, resenting the effrontery of any new man in hanging out his sign as an expert, and I called one of them good one day.

I expressed an opinion about something, and he gave me a look and said, "That is the most dangerous fallacy that is deluding our public today."

"That certainly is funny, coming from you," I said, "because I got it out of your book."

Did that slay him?

Avoid It

As a general practitioner in the field of wisdom, I find this phase of the work the least attractive of all, and just as some doctors turn over certain unpleasant jobs to specialists, except in emergencies, I avoid international affairs as much as I can without losing my license. You have to do a certain number of pieces on this topic every year, or things will change so much you will find yourself going on about Hitlerism versus Bolshevism, which would be like a doctor bleeding a patient for the flu.

The reason why it is so objectionable to me is that no matter where you start, or what line you follow, you wind up with this country in the arms of the English or, more rarely, vice versa. It is the conclusion of all the expert knowledge, if you follow this knowledge to the logical conclusion, that the United States and England are interdependent, but with reservations in favor of England.

That is to say, that any war of England is inescapably our war, because the British fleet is our defense against vanquishment and enslavement at the hands of any power which conquers England and destroys or captures the fleet. That means that any time England goes into a war, this country automatically finds herself at war, too, and it gives the English the power to decide what wars we must fight in.

protectorate of England an American protectorate, and it means that we have to take England's part in protecting her loot all over the world, including countries where the English just walked in and took. But it doesn't mean that England has to fight in our wars. England reserves freedom of action in our wars, including freedom to help our enemies—something that we nowadays wouldn't think of doing for her enemies. It means that a free republic which had to fight England twice—first to be born and then to live—has now re-entered the empire full-grown, subject, however, to such insults, ingratitude and imposition as England would never dare offer to the countries which actually belong to her empire. For example, the English wouldn't dare treat New Zealand or Canada as she treats the United States.

There must be some better conclusion, but science is slow and we haven't yet discovered what it is.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

READIN', 'RITIN', 'RITHMETIC There are about 75,000,000 adults in America. A recent survey indicates that of that number there are 36,000,000 who do not have a complete elementary school education.

The United States Office of Education reports that in 1936 there were 31,618,000 children between the ages of 5 and 17 years in the public schools of the United States.

The average attendance that year was 22,298,767. At no time since 1900 have we had fewer than 21,000,000 children in school in any one year.

Now, then, let us stop and let the figures develop. Not quite half the adult Americans lack a complete primary school education. That is, or ought to be, shocking.

The south is but a part of the picture. Our illiteracy percentage runs a bit higher than that of the east, west or middle west. We haven't the money to spend on education. Therefore, we can't spend it. And don't.

In Georgia only about 17 per cent of those who graduate from high school go on to college. Those who enter college drop out after the first year to the extent of well above the 17 per cent figure.

It has gone as high as 40 per cent.

Many rural schools in Georgia often start out with 40 in the first primary grade and end up with one or two in the last primary grade. It was never in the figures.

It is no wonder that educators, from top to bottom, are concerned. The taxpayer ought to be.

WHAT'S THE ANSWER?

What happens to those children? Figures continue to indicate that only about 5 per cent of the children at work in the United States were below 15 years of age.

The University Center plan seeks to do for higher education a job which will enable it to survive in the best possible manner, bringing the most benefit to the people in skilled surgeons, doctors, research men, chemists, technicians, engineers, and so on.

As yet no plan has been inaugurated to reach the other end, the primary education field.

The University Center plan is tremendously important. It emphasizes that a plan must be worked out for the elementary schools.

The world, so the economists say, no longer has an expanding economy. It is a more or less closed economy. New jobs, new fields, new economic frontiers will be opened up by the technicians, by the research men, by the chemists and physicists.

It may be, then, that primary education, especially in the high schools, should be revised to enable those with talents or ambitions in these and other fields of medicine, science, technology, to go on. For the others, without talents are ambitions in those directions, there perhaps should be more of the vocational type education in trades and in agriculture.

That is but a possibility. If we have been educating toward an economic basis which no longer exists, then, some answer must be developed.

This requires no endowments. It can be done within the school system. Therefore, it is not a public problem as is the University Center. Nor is it dependent on the financial gifts of those interested in education as is that plan, so vital to the south's future.

A PART OF THE PROBLEM

In South Carolina last week the able Dr. Benjamin Hubert, of the Georgia State College, spoke to Negro farm leaders and farmers, and advised them "to go south and farm."

That is excellent advice for many white boys and many colored boys. As well as men.

Yet, immediately one is confronted with the fact there are too few vocational agricultural schools for the white boy and the colored boy. He cannot learn how to farm.

One struck, too, with the fact that nowhere in the South can a white or colored farm adult attend winter classes at the state university, at the cost of the state, and learn what to do about his problems.

If we have so many adults who did not, for some reason, obtain an elementary education; if we have so many farmers who are unable to come to a working solution of their problems, why not have a free school for them?

Would it be a bad idea for the state university to offer courses, practical courses, of six weeks each winter to the adult farmers of the state?

It would profit the state to give them board and room and the courses without cost.

I actually believe we must come to something like this before we solve it.

The same thing might be done for farm women in the summer. By all means, let's have education. But,

ROOSEVELT URGES 50 HOSPITALS FOR POOR OF COUNTRY

Dr. McIntire Says President Is in as 'Perfect Condition as a Man of His Age Could Be'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(P)—President Roosevelt proposed to Congress today that the government build 50 hospitals in impoverished communities throughout the country with an appropriation of $7,500,000 to $10,000,000.

The President, represented at the White House as being very "sentimental" about it, advanced the plan on his 58th birthday, which found him in robust health himself. Dr. Ross T. McIntire said he was in as "perfect condition as any man of his age could be."

"There is still need for the federal government to participate in strengthening and increasing the health security of the nation," said Mr. Roosevelt's message, sent only to the house since the senate was in recess.

Senators Wagner, Democrat, New York, and Mead, Democrat, New York, indicated that legislation to carry out the program would be introduced in Congress this week. Representative Boren, Democrat, Oklahoma, a member of the house interstate commerce committee to which the President's message was referred, indicated the plan might encounter opposition.

Auditor Audited; Checkup Shows No 'Foolishness'

The state auditor released an audit on himself yesterday—and it was crickets all the way: issued by a private auditing concern and containing no comments about unnecessary expenses for traveling, floral offerings of Christmas cards.

Auditor Zach Arnold repeatedly has criticized other department heads for permitting unnecessary travel items on expense accounts, paying for portraits, and the like. He took pains to point out that for the auditor himself there was no expense for travel.

Osborn & Co., who made the audit, said the department spent $1,733.35 less for operations last fiscal year than the $65,490.72 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938.

MRS. ARTHUR RAY DIES NEAR SMYRNA

Prominent Club Woman of Log Cabin Section Suffers Heart Attack.

Mrs. Arthur W. Ray, 46, prominent club woman and church leader, died yesterday morning of a heart attack at her home on Log Cabin drive near Smyrna.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the Log Cabin Sunday school with the Rev. A. B. Couch and the Rev. A. B. Caldwell officiating. Burial will be in West View cemetery under direction of J. Austin Dillon.

A resident of the Log Cabin community for 30 years and a member of a well-known Atlanta family, Mrs. Ray was a past matron of the Bolton Order of the Eastern Star and a past president of the Log Cabin Sunday school, of which she was a charter member. She was a member of the Smyrna Methodist church.

She is survived by her husband, two sons, Dr. Lewis Ray and Walter Ray, both of Atlanta; a sister, Mrs. J. D. Simmons, of Miami; and two grandchildren, Robert and Lewis Ray Jr.

GOOD MORNING By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

IN THE ORIENT.
Dr. M. T. Rankin, secretary for the Orient of the Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, addressing a group of Atlanta ministers Monday morning, heartened us with his optimistic interpretation of what is going on in the Orient and his prophecy of what will ultimately happen there.

Intimately acquainted with conditions in China, where he has lived for two decades, Dr. Rankin gave us an insight into the situation from the standpoint of the Chinese. For example, the war is going pretty much as the Chinese planned it. That is to say, as they planned to meet Japan's attack. First, they planned to spread out Japan's attack so that they could not follow up their victories, having to rush their forces to other points of resistance. This is illustrated in the fact that today Japan is unable to capitalize her victories. Second, China hopes to effect a period of stalemate, during which they will carry on such guerrilla warfare as to utterly disconcert the Japanese forces. Third, by the end of the period of stalemate, China hopes to have ready an army, now in training in the west, sufficient to drive out the Japanese forces. Dr. Rankin thinks they are entering upon the second step of this strategy, that is the period of stalemate, at this time, Japan, he thinks, can never conquer China.

"God is moving amid the ruin and havoc of Japan's attack upon China," said Dr. Rankin, "and we are witnessing unmistakable evidence of spiritual awakening and progress. The Kingdom of God is indestructible. Atoms may bomb meeting houses, but bombs cannot destroy the Kingdom of God which is within the hearts of men. They may bomb hospitals and schools, but they cannot destroy the love of doctors and teachers who have gone to China to mediate Jesus to the people. And the same evidences are definitely present in Japan. The Japanese people are lovable. They are not responsible for this war. They are the victims of pagan philosophies. I made a tour of Japan last March, and I found there a deepening loyalty on the part of the Christians to the Kingdom of God. When this fearful war is over, I expect to see in Japan, just as I do in China, a great revival of religion and a turning everywhere to faith in God and the Lord Jesus Christ."

Dr. Rankin believes, as many of us do, that the Kingdom of God is the only authority that can ultimately call for a totalitarian allegiance. Therefore, Christian missionaries have remained in danger zones, ministering to suffering humanity. Christianity can give no thought to personal safety and ease in a world so filled with human suffering. And out of this holocaust of suffering and sacrifice will come victory, for God will cause the wrath of man to praise Him. Selah.

There's No Hope for Russia Till Stalin Is Overthrown, Says Dr. George Counts (Who Shows No Stain of Red)

U. S. Teachers' President Interprets Theories of Patriotic American.

By HAROLD MARTIN

Dr. George S. Counts of Columbia University wears his hair roached back like Leon Trotsky, the well-known Russian exile in Mexico, but that's about the only resemblance to a Communist careful examination can find in him.

Dr. Counts' arrival here yesterday to speak to the Atlanta and Fulton county members of the American Federation of Teachers, of which he is president, caused some little stir in certain quarters. Word reached the newspaper offices that Dr. Counts was more than a little stained with red and that he was a pernicious influence in the American scene.

Query on Communism
We asked Dr. Counts if he was a Communist.

He said "No." In fact, he said, the Communists consider him a Red-baiter, more or less.

We asked him if he was investigated by the Dies committee.

He said "No" to that, adding that the Communists put him and Mr. Dies on the same side of the fence.

We asked him why some folks thought he was a Communist, about all these pamphlets he had written, and all these visits he had made to Russia, and what about this business of his not wanting teachers to take an oath of loyalty to the Constitution, and so on.

He started back at the beginning and explained it all, and before he was through he had given a pretty fair interpretation of the political theories of a patriotic American whose eyes at the same time are not entirely blind to the faults of his country.

Born in Kansas
"I was born in Kansas a good many years ago into a family that has been in this country for about 300 years.

"I was educated in the schools of Kansas, and in my schooling I learned, as all little boys learned, that Russia under the Czar was as cruelly ridden by despotic rule as any country I ever been in the history of the world.

"Consequently, when, after many years, the revolution came and overthrew the Czar and set up a people's rule, like all liberal, humane Americans, I rejoiced that the old despotism was gone. I wasn't happy in contemplating the blood that was spilled, but I realized that the revolution was based upon some great, unchangeable ideas about the rights of man—some of the same ideas upon which our own country is founded.

"One of these great ideas was the right of all men to achieve economic justice, and along with many others I watched and studied the Russian revolutionary movement as it moved in this direction.

Visited Russia.
"On my own and as a member of the Columbia University International Institute I visited Russia. I wrote of what I found there as honestly as I could. I translated Russian books. One of them, the New Russian Primer—outlining in beautiful prose some of the great gested last week at a meeting of the County Planning Commission by Councilman Howard Haire, a member of the City Planning Commission.

"Let's get together," Mr. Haire urged then. "The city will put its money into the 'city' and let the county handle the project if that will help speed things along."

Gilbert Reports.
Mr. Gilbert in his report to the commissioners yesterday, which preceded the favorable action, declared his belief the rights-of-way could be obtained for less than the city's estimate of $135,000, that the railroads could be induced to give more than the suggested $20,000, and that it would require at least six months for the project to have effect upon local unemployment.

In reference to unemployment, relief agency officials have pointed out that the recent severe cold merely emphasized a continuing situation and that conditions would be as critical next summer as now.

Satisfaction with the day's development was expressed by J. T. Marshall, Georgia resident engineer of the United States Bureau of Roads, who had felt it would be necessary to transfer the $485,000 federal fund to some other project elsewhere if action were not forthcoming soon.

Wants Assurance.
"Naturally, the government is not concerned with how the city and county work out the details of their co-operation," Mr. Marshall said. "Once we are definitely assured that the rights-of-way will be available at the proper time,

"I realized then that the methods of the Russian revolution should be introduced here. We revolted once and gained our freedom by force of arms. And after that we set up the forms by which for four after our problems could be solved peacefully.

"Our fundamental task is getting our economic system to working efficiently. Our second task is to do it without violation of the democratic principle.

"The school should seek to promote a devotion to the common good. The thing needed is the teaching of patriotism in its most enlightened and humane form—the rearing of a generation eager to serve community, nation and mankind in times of peace—able, fearless and incorruptible," he declared.

That's the reason for my attitude toward the oath of allegiance required of school teachers. I do not object to taking the oath. But I do object to the motives behind its imposition. I feel that it is an effort to crush freedom of thought and freedom of speech in teaching. I think teachers should be required to go over the oath. I think they should be required to know and understand the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. If I can truthfully attempt to teach that there is no idea in all of Russia today that I can find, which might tend toward human betterment, and I violating my oath of allegiance to teach that many high and noble ideals motivated the revolution? "We prate too much of the horrors of other forms of government. We speak too little of the great blessings of our own. If we fully knew and understood what is guaranteed to us, we need have no fear that our people would follow after some other form."

DOROTHY THOMPSON ACCUSED BY VETS

Trying To Get U. S. in War, They Charge; Dies Inquiry Sought.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 30.—(P)—Statewide support for a Dies committee investigation of Communist Dorothy Thompson was sought today by local Veterans of Foreign Wars officials, who charged she was "trying to involve this country in war."

The Americanization committee of Sergeant James W. Hennessey Post No. 712, V. F. W., said officers had been authorized to draft a resolution demanding the investigation.

Veterans were in the audience when Miss Thompson lectured here last night on "What Kind of Peace?"

Post Commander Joseph Mitchell said Miss Thompson was biased, complained she condemned Germany "but failed to criticize England," and added "All we can say is if the people who attended believed her, then we are headed for war."

VETS LITTLE GREEN ON HISTORY—THOMPSON

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(P)—Dorothy Thompson, columnist and lecturer, issued the following statement today in answer to a proposal by a Newark post of Veterans of Foreign Wars for a Dies committee investigation of her:

"The Veterans of Foreign Wars of Newark not only seem a little green on American history, but they don't seem to keep up on current events.

"If they had done the latter, they ought to demand an investigation of Carter Glass, conservative Democratic senator from Virginia; Mr. Henry L. Simson, secretary of state under Herbert Hoover; Frank Knox, Republican candidate for vice president; John Lord O'Brien, former assistant attorney general and Republican candidate for the senate from New York, and ex-President Hoover himself and countless more of our better citizens, all of whose views on Finland and the issues of the war in general largely correspond to my own.

"My own view is that it would be suicidal for the United States to remain quiet and unwilling to use its political and economic power while the Bolsheviks or Nazis or a combination of the two overrun the whole of western Europe, including the highly civilized neutrals.

"If this be treason, let the Veterans of Foreign Wars of Newark make the most of it."

The Vogue for Costume Jewelry Brings Hands Into Fashion Spotlight

Neck, Shoulders Must Be Kept Smooth Too

By Lillian Mae.

Charm bracelets and jewelry heavily laden on the wrist, the vogue for deep polished and costume rings, and long sleeves for evening, all conspire to bring hands into the fashion spotlight. If they aren't kept beguiling, the effect of a whole new costume may be ruined.

That's why a tube of hand cream, made by the makers of a large manicuring line, is such a handy beauty aid. In its attractive pink and white tube, it is light equipment for a handbag or suitcase. This I know, for I used such a tube on a recent cross-country trip where I encountered thermometer ranges of from 40 degrees above to 38 degrees below zero.

In addition to the tube, there's an attractive, newly-designed pink-and-white jar for home use. Your bathroom and kitchen, as well as your office desk, are incomplete without a tube or jar of this rich, smooth-textured, softening hand cream. Looking much like whipped cream, it has such grand softening and smoothing qualities, and it's completely greaseless. A moment after it has been used, you may slip on your best long-sleeved dress without a care.

Try the after-gloves-off treatment in chill weather. Gloves, unless fresh from the cleaner, sink into the skin causes it to look dingy and cracked. Wash your hands after removing your gloves, smooth hand cream down over the hands, using opposite thumb and working briskly over the knuckles and across the wrist. Dab an extra bit of cream between each finger and in the little pocket between thumb and finger.

Then clean your hands and pull wrists back and forth with hands locked. This will work the cream well into the pockets which are apt to be neglected without your knowing it and will over knuckles where they are apt to form. Once a day apply hand cream right up over your elbows, and with hands well covered, with cream, pat them over danger spots on your neck, and down over your shoulders.

Phone me and I'll tell you the name of this lovely new cream. If you do not live in Atlanta, write me, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Woman's Quiz

Q. I have been told that my diet is deficient in vitamin "C" and that I should eat sweet peppers. In addition to stuffing peppers how else may they be prepared?

A. Peppers may be diced and boiled in very little water until tender and served with buttered corn, carrots, or string beans. They may be added to a pan of fried, sliced tomatoes until slightly browned. Raw peppers may be finely chopped with raw cabbage and seasoned with mayonnaise or sour cream, with sugar and salt to taste.

Q. Are pearls in oysters spoiled when the oysters are cooked?

A. Only pearl oysters and certain fresh-water mollusks produce valuable pearls, and they would be affected by cooking, but the edible oyster never produces pearls of commercial value. A circular, explaining the reason for this, is available from our Service Bureau, 1013 Thirteenth street, Washington, D. C. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, for a free copy.

Have you a household problem to solve? Write your question clearly, sign your name and address, enclose a three-cent postage stamp and mail to the Woman's Editor of The Constitution, Washington, D. C. For a reply. Three of the most interesting answers will be printed here daily. Don't telephone; write as directed.

Afternoon Frock for Smart Women

By Lillian Mae.

Every young woman enjoys making heads turn as she passes by! And every smart woman knows that nothing is so effective as well-treated simplicity. Take Lillian Mae's Pattern 4310! The high neckline and round yoke make an effective background for dramatic jewelry. The bodice is plain, with gentle softness under the yoke and above the pointed waist seam. Front and back skirt paneling gives slim lines. Why not add a matching or vividly contrasting sash, trying it in a perky back bustle-bow? Back buttoning and a choice of short, three-quarter or long sleeves complete this frock.

Pattern 4310 is available in misses' and women's sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 16 takes 4 1/2 yards 35-inch fabric and 1 yard of contrast.

Send 15 cents (15c) in coins for this Lillian Mae pattern. Do not send stamps. Write plainly size, name, address and style number. "How do you manage to have so many smart-looking clothes?" people will ask if you use our new brilliant Lillian Mae pattern book before planning your spring wardrobe. It's a complete fashion picture, with day and night glamor frocks, spring bridal wear, charm for 40-plus, town and country modes. There's a budget wardrobe, spring seasonings for the young set and carnival-gay cottons. All yours—for the easy sewing! Order a copy now! Book 15 cents.

Worry, Anxiety Disturb Your Digestion

By Dr. William Brady.

That great teacher, Dr. William Osler, gave two pages in his famous "Practice of Medicine" to Glendard's disease (enteroptosis) and summed up treatment in a sentence: In a majority of all cases four indications are present: To treat the existing neurasthenia, to relieve the nervous dyspepsia, to overcome the constipation, and to afford mechanical support to the organs.

Here, now, I shall say only that Dr. Osler wrote that at least 50 years ago.

The idea of exhaustion of "nervous energy" is untenable and that the concept of "neurasthenia" covers a great deal of incompetence and dishonesty. Decide for yourself who is incompetent and who is dishonest when "neurasthenia" is seriously offered and seriously accepted as a diagnosis.

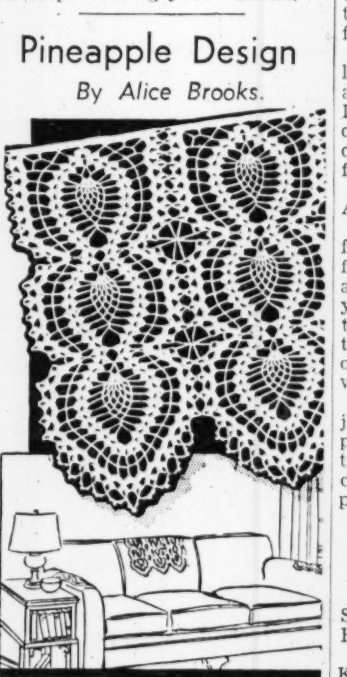

And "nervous dyspepsia," or "nervous indigestion," or "nervous indigestion," well, my dear children, I am not unkindly of the fact that an emotional upset or shock may not only stop digestion in its tracks, so to speak, but reverse the process and put the meal right back where it was before you began eating. I know, too, that less extreme unpleasant emotion, such as constant irritation or annoyance, worry or anxiety, may retard and disturb digestion in any or all stages. If you will compromise with me and limit the term "nervous dyspepsia" or "nervous indigestion" to that, we needn't quarrel at all. But if you have a smug notion that because eminent specialists of the past or present have been willing to ascribe any ailment they didn't quite understand to "nervous indigestion," count me out, for I insist that is sheer hooey. In the "Nerves and Nutrition" book I endeavor to show that the actual trouble in a large number of cases labeled "nervous indigestion" or "nervous dyspepsia" is nutritional deficiency, particularly deficiency of vitamin B complex. How common such nutritional deficiency is in this country today you may judge from the observation of Norman Jolliffe as quoted with approval by Professor George B. Cowgill in his recent report to the AMA Council on Foods on "The Need for the Addition of Vitamin B1 to Staple American Foods." Said Jolliffe:

"It seems, therefore, that a 55 per cent fraction of the calories in the American diet of 1940 (when a good deal of whole wheat flour and a comparatively small amount of sugar furnished the 55 per cent of calories) containing a minimum of 500 international units of vitamin B1 (in the day's total food) will be replaced in the contemporary American diet by a like fraction (composed of a steadily decreasing proportion of refined white flour and a steadily increasing proportion of sugar) containing only about 50 international units."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
Lemon to Prevent Boredom.
Apply to the skin several times a day lemon juice with soft cloth, but do not rub. Even when the skin is red and tender, but not broken, lemon will prevent chafing from developing. (Mrs. P. A.)
Answer—Thank you. Vita-in-C promotes healing in wounds. Your suggestion may prove helpful—if other correspondents report their experience.

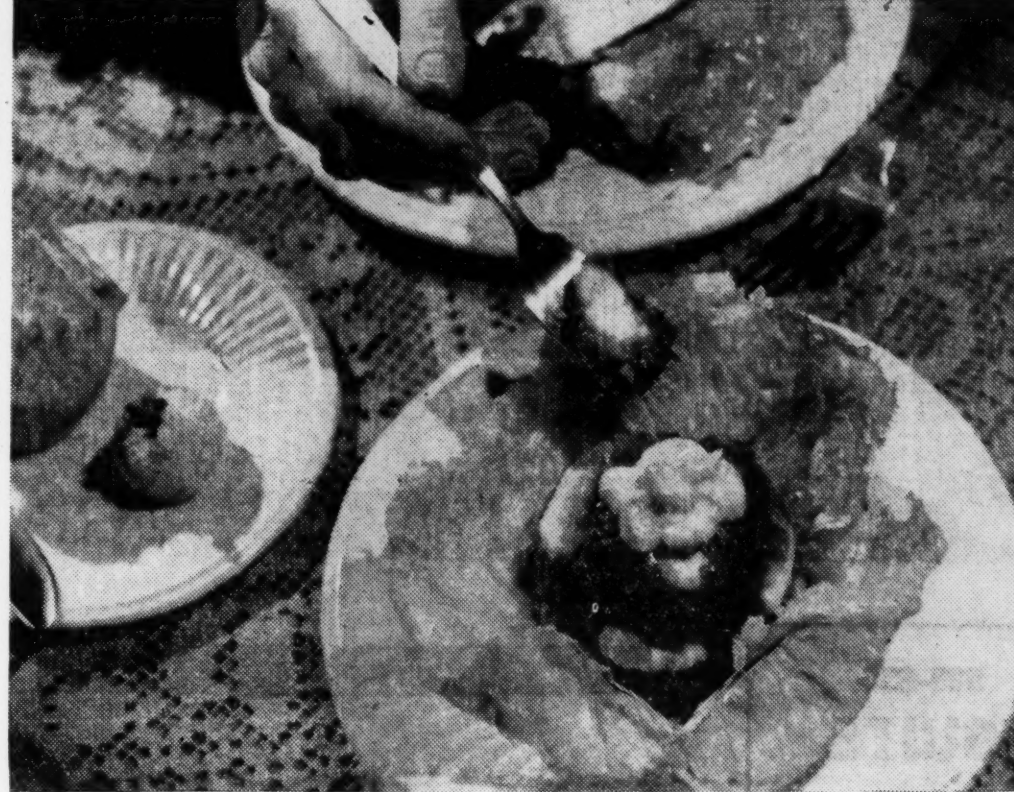

Wheat to Eat.
Your fine article, apparently have some effect. (The G.E.B.)
Answer—Thank you. The clipping enclosed is a picture of youngsters in a kindergarten preparing their own muffins for a party dinner, made of washed wheat. Memorandum "Wheat to Eat" tells how to use wheat in the daily diet. For copy send stamped envelope bearing your address.

This pretty winter salad is made of cranberries, celery and marshmallows.

Colorful Winter Salads Add Zest To a Meal

By Sally Saver.

A salad lovely to look at and delightful to eat is the one pictured today—cranberry marshmallow. Made of tart cranberries which do so much for winter meals, and crunchy celery, it is a colorful salad that will gain immediate favor with the whole family. This is how it is made:

Cranberry Marshmallow Salad:
1 cup water
1 cup sugar
1 quarter-pound package marshmallows, cut in halves
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1-2 cup celery, cut fine
1-4 cup walnut meats, broken
Wash and pick over cranberries. Add water and cook until berries burst. Remove from flame and with a wooden spoon press through a sieve. To the cranberry puree add the sugar, then cook for two minutes. Remove from flame and add marshmallows, folding over and over until marshmallows are partially melted. Set aside to cool. When cool, but not set, add lemon juice, celery and nut meats. Pour into large mold individual molds and chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce and serve with mayonnaise. Serves seven or eight.

Try serving it with fowl or oysters.

Student Asks How to Count Trumps

By Harold Sharpsteen.

Dear Mr. Sharpsteen: According to your recent table of playing-trick values for determining trump winners at a suit bid, we were told to count all over the first three trumps held for one full winner each, and then add the trump honor-values.

In other words, when I hold, for example: H—A K J 10 7 5, am I supposed to count the 10-7-5 as three long trump winners and then add two more trump winners for my heart ace and king?

I have been warned that I may lose two tricks in trumps if one adversely holds, say: H—Q 9 8 6 4. I am one of your "teen-age" students and enjoy your special Friday lessons. Please let me hear from you.

MARY L. B.,
Atlanta, Ga.
Answer: There is no need to fear counting five trump winners, for purposes of bidding, with the above trump holding. It is true you might conceivably lose two tricks with those five missing trumps massed against you, but only timid, pessimistic souls would expect such a catastrophe.

Dear Mr. Sharpsteen: Should I jump to a slam in hearts after my partner's Culbertson four no-trump bid, or sign off with the enclosed hand? The bidding had proceeded:

NORTH SOUTH
3H 2S
4NT 4H
4NT (?)
My holding was:
S—K J 10 7 6 3 D—K Q J
H—A J 4 C—3
MRS. A. J. M.
Knoxville, Tenn.
Answer: Your partner's four no-trump bid shows either the missing three aces or two aces and the heart king. You are justified in bidding six hearts immediately, holding the heart ace, because of your singleton club and the hidden values in the diamond suit. Furthermore you hold a sound 3-1-2 honor-tricks to make your original jump suit takeout in spades.

It is also conventional to respond six hearts, holding the heart king instead of the ace. "Bid six in the best trump suit, with one ace of a bid suit or with the kings of all bid suits, if holding values not previously shown." Furthermore, you were not obliged to stretch your hand to make your game-forcing two-spade takeout.

MY DAY Two Student Youth Organizations in U. S.

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON—There seems to be so much confusion in the minds of my correspondents about the two student youth organizations, both of which are affiliated with the American Youth Congress, that I am inclined to clarify some of the differences between them in this column. Some older people seem to think that there is but one student organization, whereas there are two national ones and many more local ones, I imagine. The two big ones are the National Student Federation of the United States of America, and the American Student Union. Their membership and programs differ, so I give them below:

The National Student Federation is composed of student councils of member colleges which send representatives, while the American Student Union is composed of individual members. The National Student Federation, in its meeting, had a program which dealt mainly with local problems of campus government, though they also discussed national policy, approved the NYA, the American Youth Commission report, etc. Their peace discussion was only one out of 18 discussion sessions at their meeting. The American Student Union, on the contrary, centered their whole discussion at their meeting on questions related to peace and the United States foreign and domestic policy.

The main differences that emerged in resolutions passed are that the National Student Federation opposes United States participation in any foreign war, while the American Student Union opposed participation in the present war because it is an "imperialistic" war caused by aggression and appeasement in the hope of launching "a war against the Soviet Union."

The National Student Federation wishes no war loans granted to any nation engaged in armed conflict, warns against efforts to whip up war hysteria, condemns all acts of aggression and violations of territorial integrity, and proposes the United States call a conference of neutrals to start peace negotiations. The American Student Union, on the contrary, opposes loans to Finland, sale of planes to Finland, agrees that no loans should be made to any European belligerent, desires an embargo on war materials to Japan, but is willing to give immediate credits and loans to China. It was against war hysteria, specifically pro-ally, opposes a moral embargo on the Soviet Union, condemns German aggression, Japanese aggression, British imperialism, and, by inference, includes France; makes no proposals as to the role of the United States in world citizenship, and finally rejects an amendment to condemn Russian aggression.

While I think the stand of both groups shows a lack of comprehensive knowledge of the entire situation and is, on the whole, unimportant, it is valuable to have the interest of youth and important that they should discuss and gain greater knowledge. I attended Mrs. Townsend's concert this morning and enjoyed the three artists very much. Mr. Emile Baume, the pianist, played very beautiful selections, and Mr. John Seagle and Miss Suzanne Stern of the Prague opera, delighted everybody with their songs, especially their duets.

Simple Heartfelt Courtesy Is Always the Best Etiquette

By Caroline Chatfield.

Pathetic, the way some young girls, and grown-ups, too, for that matter, are so eager to appear sophisticated that they dare not be natural and say and do the things their warm hearts suggest. They are more concerned with being conventional than with being courteous and in consequence they frequently make the worst sort of impression on the very people whose good opinion they are trying to win.

Men, as a rule, are far more sensible. They aren't afraid of being thought unconventional—even in stride. They take things in stride, make their own etiquette, suffer less mental anguish and in the end fare better than the poor females who think they must be proper according to Mrs. Post.

Can't we all appreciate the distress of this young thing? Miss Chatfield when a girl goes to her boy friend's home for dinner should she sit in the living room until the meal is announced or is it proper for her to tell her hostess? Some people tell her one thing and some another. Last time I had dinner there I sat in the living room and was miserable because I was afraid the boy's mother would think I ought to help her. I want her to like me; so tell me what to do.

Good news, dear child, simple heartfelt courtesy is best etiquette and, when you have the impulse to help your hostess, you may rest assured it's proper. When a guest knows that there's no servant in the house and knows there's extra work to be done because she's there, the least she can do is to offer to lend a hand. It is the housekeeper's privilege to accept or decline the offer but either way she appreciates the gesture.

We can't put on airs over the kitchen stove and when hostess and guest get their heads and hands together in the preparation and serving of a meal there's always free and easy conversation

Star Would Give Up Movie Career If She Could

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 30.—I catch Andrea Leeds on the hoof, running from the studio where she is starring in "Earthbound," to do some running of her Beverly Hills home, where she is starring as the wife of Bob Howard (son of Millionaire C. S. Howard, owner of Seabiscuit).

"It's not easy to run a home and be a film actress," says Andrea. "Why not give up the act, in part?" I suggest cautiously. "I want to," she replies emphatically and stops running long enough to tell me: "Just before I got married I saw Mr. Goldwyn (her boss) and told him I wanted to leave pictures after my marriage and would he release me from my contract with him. He was very sympathetic and suggested I should wait three months after the marriage before doing anything definite, as he was sure I'd want to stay in pictures. So he gave me three months off—without pay. Then, I saw him again and said that I wanted to leave pictures more than ever. 'You can't,' he told me. 'I've got a commitment for you (in "Earthbound").' How about after that?" I asked him. But after that it seems that Mr. Goldwyn still wants Miss Leeds.

So here we have a strange situation—a rich movie star who wants to be a wife only—but who to be both. "Why don't you break your contract anyway?" suggests this writer. "I've thought of that, too," says Andrea. "But one of these days I might want to return to pictures—and I'd be stuck with these three years I owe Goldwyn. No, the best thing for me to do is to work them off—and then I'll be free." Something tells me that Andrea will have to interrupt the three-year movie stretch for a new type of role—motherhood. "Yes, we both want a baby," Andrea admits. "I admit a hunch this event has a 1940 date-line."

Behind the scenes . . . Clark Gable's dressing room door is wide open—and it shouldn't be—when he's changing clothes for a new scene in "Strange Cargo" (or when a female columnist is passing by). . . John Garfield tells me a funny item about his brief appearance as a ghost in "Four Wives." "I was on suspension at the time," says John, "but they needed me to work for one day. So they (Warners) took me off suspension for one day, gave me one day's salary. Next day I was back on suspension." How did they get Garfield to do the day's work? Easy. John wanted to do some radio jobs. Warners do not like their players to broadcast—except to boost a studio picture. Garfield took advantage of the situation to get permission for four radio assignments.

Jane Withers—or her mother—or her agent—it's probably the agent—rates a bouquet for business acumen. Until her current personal appearance jaunt, the juvenile miss received a flat salary of $5,000 weekly when on tour. This time Jane waived the $5,000 in favor of a percentage payment. And garnered an average of $7,500 weekly. (Sometimes I wonder whether there is really all that money in the world). . . Laurence Olivier will have to wear "Pride and Prejudice" chore with Greer Garson—she's a tall gal.

I wonder, will Mickey Rooney take along his own professional rhumba dancer to the President's birthday ball in Washington? Mickey, when in Hollywood, rarely performs the dance with an amateur. Although once on the set of a Hardy picture he did get Fay Holden to take a few dance steps with him, and Miss Holden said she didn't feel right for two days afterwards!

A stirring adventure-romance of six persons marooned on a tropical island is told in "Swiss Family Robinson." Gene Towne's presentation of the famous classic featuring Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best and Freddie Bartholomew.

Junior League Magazine Features Atlantan's Story on GWTW Ball

By Sally Forth.

CLAIMING its rightful place in the most important position in the current issue of the Junior League magazine is the story of the "Gone With the Wind" ball, the stupendous undertaking sponsored so successfully by the local League at the time of the film premiere in Atlanta. The interesting account of the ball was written by Sarah Adair Reed, one of the League's most talented members.

Illustrating the well-written article are six photographs of members of the League who were responsible for the magnificent affair, as well as pictures of the film stars who attended the premiere and the ball. The excellent likenesses of David O. Selznick, Vivien Leigh, Olivia De Havilland, Evelyn Keyes and Ona Munson are the work of an amateur photographer, Howard Candler Jr. Others pictured are Mesdames Green Warren, W. Colquitt Carter, Malon Courts, and Martin Kilpatrick, the efficient chairmen of the ball, as well as Mavor Harrisfield, Mrs. Collett Munger and Clark Gable.

In her thorough coverage of the ball, Sarah began with the nucleus of the idea which is credited to Mrs. William Parker and Mrs. Malon Courts, who were encouraged in their plan by Mrs. Green Warren, regional director of A. J. L. A.

Further representing Atlanta are several attractive photographs of former prominent residents. Glimpsed in typical South American garb are the Count and Countess Bernard de Sleyes and their two charming daughters, who reside in Buenos Aires. The Countess is the former Elizabeth Thompson, who though a native Atlantan, divided her time between Sea Island and Atlanta.

Climaxing the excellent contributions from members of the Atlanta League is an article by Mrs. Lon Grove, another talented writer, entitled "Caribbean Treasure." Mrs. Grove gives a vivid and enchanting description of historical spots to be seen on a Caribbean cruise.

REPRESENTING Atlanta at the annual fancy dress ball at Washington and Lee University Friday evening will be a trio of lovely belles. Boarding the train this evening for Lexington, Va., will be Betty Garges and her mother, Mrs. Herbert Garges, and Claire Johnson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Johnson. Although attractive Emily Mobley will not leave until Thursday, thus missing the dance scheduled for that evening, she will be on hand for the costume ball and will be among the visiting belles attending the tea-dance and evening dance on Saturday.

Carrying out the selected theme for the fancy dress ball, this year the guests will wear costumes of the period of the 1880's. The ballroom for the gala occasion will represent a scene of a tea-dance which might have taken place after the first Kentucky Derby. Each year the traditional ball, which attracts belles from all over the country, carries out a theme or period representing an epoch in American history.

Besides being chaperon for Betty and Claire, Mrs. Garges will have an opportunity to see her sons, Herbert Jr. and Robert, who are students at Washington and Lee.

REGARDLESS of where a contest is being held, Atlanta is usually in the forefront. This opinion was confirmed recently in the news of the contest won by Joe Teague Jr., of this city. Joe, as you know, is a student at the Ohio State University in Columbus, Ohio, and he attended a night club there recently and took part in the hobby horse race which was part of the floor show presented by the orchestra. He won first prize, a bottle of champagne, and was introduced on the air by the master of ceremonies as the "Gentleman from the Land of the Peachtrees."

ELABORATE balls and parties were given over the country yesterday in celebration of President Roosevelt's birthday, but Sally wagers there was none staged with more originality than that given by Mrs. R. E. Smith for the kindergarten pupils at the Garden Hills Grammar school.

The children turned the tables on the guests—their mothers—each of whom was requested to take part in the various stunts and games planned for the afternoon. It was an amusing sight to see mother jumping through a hoop, rolling balls, and participating in other childish games.

But, even at that, all the good times were not confined to the mothers, for Mrs. Smith arranged a unique game for the children. After the manner of that time-honored game of pinning the tail on the donkey, the children were

3 tablespoons olive oil
1 onion, diced
1 green pepper, diced
3 tablespoons chopped ripe olives
1 cup mushrooms, chopped (fresh or canned)

1 tablespoon flour
1 cup tomato juice
1 cup bouillon or chicken consommé

Twilight Ceremony at Cathedral Unites Miss Willis and Mr. Cates

MR. AND MRS. ALVIN B. CATES JR.

Miss Virginia Willis, beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clarke Willis, became the bride of Alvin Bingham Cates Jr. at an impressive twilight ceremony solemnized at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the Cathedral of St. Philip.

Bishop H. J. Mikkil performed the marriage service in the presence of an assemblage of prominent Atlantans and out-of-town guests, and the full vested choir, accompanied on the organ by Thomas Brumby, rendered musical selections.

Myriads of white flowers adorned the altar, which was illuminated by stately cathedral candles burning in branched candelabra. The candles were also placed in the windows of the church, creating an effect of ethereal beauty.

Family pews were designated by single tapers tied with tulle.

Alvin Bingham Cates Sr. served as his son's best man, and ushers included John O. Chiles, Albert Howell, Philip Shultz and Gus Ascher.

Groomsmen were Bryant Jones, E. Dargan Cole, James Calhoun, Teddy Lambert, Walter Willis and George McCarty.

Mrs. E. Dargan Cole, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a Germaine Monteil period model of bon-bon pink grosgrain londe fashioned with a close-fitting, laced bodice, and a voluminous skirt. Her matching maline hat was trimmed with a brief veil which cascaded to her shoulders, and she carried a bouquet of pink carnations encased in a pink lace frill and outlined with waxed camellia leaves.

Bridesmaids were Misses Nancy Calhoun, Sarah Cates, Ann Harris, George Dargan, Ann Pappheimer and Mrs. McKee Nunally. They wore bon-bon pink grosgrain londe gowns fashioned like that of the matron of honor, and carried similar bouquets.

Charles Willis Sr. gave his daughter in marriage. The bride's exotic beauty was enhanced by her Molyneux wedding gown of lustrous white duchess satin, the moulded bodice of which featured draped neckline and long close-fitting sleeves. The extremely full skirt was gathered to the low waistline and extended to form a court train, several yards in length. Her illusion tulle veil was caught to her head with three fragrant white camellias worn atop her dark tresses and billowed over the satin train. She carried a bouquet of white camellias outlined with waxed green camellia leaves. Her only ornament was a dainty strand of pearls which encircled her slender throat.

The Piedmont Driving Club formed the setting for the reception at which the bride's parents entertained after the ceremony.

Mrs. Willis received guests wearing an afternoon gown of black chantilly lace and maline with a matching maline hat trimmed with glycerine feathers and a brief face veil. A shoulder cluster of deep purple orchids complemented her attire.

Assisting in entertaining were Mr. and Mrs. Alvin B. Cates Sr., Mr. and Mrs. E. Dargan Cole, Charles Willis Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Madison Bell.

Mr. Cates and his bride left during the evening for a wedding trip to New York City, after which they will fly to Bermuda via the trans-Atlantic Clipper. Mrs. Cates wore for traveling a Norman Hartnell suit of absorbent green, the tweed top-coat of which featured shades of absinthine green, citron yellow and oyster white in a plaid design. Her matching green belt was spiced with yellow and oyster colored quilts, her accessories were of green and her flowers were a cluster of fresh yellow tulips worn at the waistline.

Upon their return, the bride and groom will establish residence in this city, where they will be prominent acquisitions to the young married contingent of society.

Placing of War Refugees in Dixie Industry Is Career Plan of Senior at Agnes Scott

Miss Elizabeth Alderman Studies Three Languages To Aid Work.

By CHARLES GILMORE.

If the French, Germans or Spaniards have a word for it, Miss Elizabeth Alderman probably knows it. A senior at Agnes Scott College, she is majoring in three languages.

When all the shouting at commencement is over, these languages will be put to use in a national resettlement program which is helping European refugees find the best location for a new start in this country.

Likes Sociology. It seems Miss Alderman, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Alderman, of 565 Terrace avenue, always has enjoyed talking in something other than English. She also has a bent for sociology. The two interests were brought together by the second World War and the flood of refugees it sent to the United States.

"Our problem," she says, "is resettling these people where they are most needed in American industry and agriculture. Until last year most of this work was confined to professional men like teachers and doctors. But now we must absorb industrial workers and farmers."

Clearing house for refugee resettlement is the National Relief Service, with offices in New York city. It unites all private committees' working to aid immigrants, and it also might aid Miss Alderman by making her a part of the organization with offices, preferably, in the south.

Fears Time Element. Miss Alderman would like to study sociology another year after her graduation, but is afraid of the time element. "I might take the time to study, and by then the war would be over and the future in resettlement work would be doubtful," she says.

She wants to enter the field now, while the demand is there, and get enough training to continue sociological work after the war and the refugee problem are solved.

Her chosen field, she believes, is contributing to the welfare of this country. "If we left refugees to their own resources, they would pour into already overcrowded fields. But if we organize them and place them where they are needed, the nation's business can't help but benefit," she declares.

Resettlement of European refugees in southern industry will be the career of Miss Elizabeth Alderman, a senior at Agnes Scott College. She is majoring in the French, German and Spanish languages, and by June hopes to understand them as well as her native Georgia-American dialect.

MALARIA IS TRACED TO WOODLAND FIRES

State Health Director Tells Conference Georgia Water Supply Is Threatened.

Increase in malaria in north Georgia can be traced directly to the destruction of forests by fires and bad sawmilling methods, Dr. T. F. Abernethy, head of the state health department, yesterday told a meeting of the Southern States Forest Fire Commission.

"Cutting away of the forests, and burning of protective growths along the banks of streams have flattened out stream beds and have created swamps and marshes where malaria mosquitoes breed," Dr. Abernethy declared.

He also said that debbing of forest lands, caused by fires and cutting, would seriously affect Georgia's water level within the next 10 years.

"Unless something is done," he said, "within a decade we'll have delegations from committees calling on the legislature, demanding some relief from low-water reserves. Streams in denuded areas carry off the water supply too fast. Trees slow down the flow."

W. L. Shaddix, acting director of the fire prevention association, told the group of a plan for organizing back-country boys in heavily wooded areas into voluntary fire patrols for fighting small fires that threaten timber stands.

Present at the meeting were Dr. Abernethy, Mrs. Dugas McCleskie, director of the Atlanta Center; Mrs. Bruce M. Hughes, of the Lenox Park club, secretary of the Garden Center; Mrs. Arthur Tufts, conservation chairman for the Garden Clubs of Georgia; E. V. Wheeler, state supervisor of education for the WPA; J. F. Brooks and Clint Davis, of the United States forestry service; Bradford McFadden, assistant secretary of the Georgia Bankers' Association; Dr. Willis A. Sutton, Georgia director of the state patrol plan, and Freeman Strickland, vice president of the First National bank, treasurer of the forest fire association.

MACK LOOSES PURSE STRINGS IN PENNANT BID

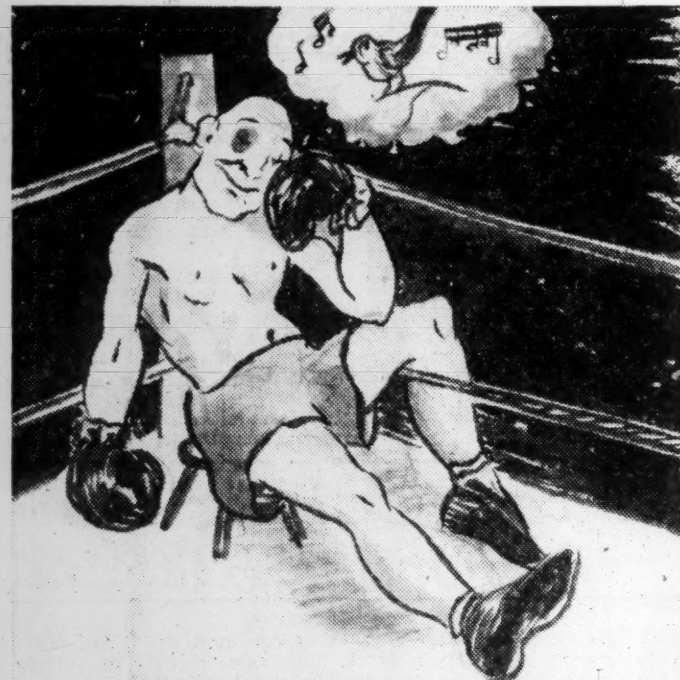

All in the Game
—by Jack Troy

If the sight of blood, which runs red in the veins of hard-working CCC boys, is repulsive to one's so-called aesthetic sense; if blood brings beads of cold perspiration to the forehead and a hollow feeling in the pit of the old breadbasket—then Fort McPherson is no place to go for the next three nights.

But if the sight of hearty, free-swinging devotees of old Marquis of Queensbury brings a tingle to the scalp and stirs Rebel red blood—then Fort Mac will be just the spot tonight, Thursday night and Friday night.

For the boys who respond to the bugle will take no few pot-shots at each other's noodle—all for the glory of the camps of District B, of CCC—and for the medals, cups and the needy of the post.

Like so many worthwhile charities, this one gives plenty in return. The financial benefits assuredly will help many an unfortunate boy in khaki who has a family, and everything a fight fan gives in the way of price of admission he will get in return in the action to be presented in the ring of the new post gymnasium.

Price of admission is very reasonable and the "Welcome" sign to all fight fans of Atlanta and surrounding territory has been hung out by General Robert Van Horn, Major Owen Summers, Captain James Emigh and Lieutenant Eugene Brown—the men responsible for the fort's extravaganza of fistiana.

There will be 40 white and 16 colored fights—survivors of the heavy firing in the sub-district tournaments. Wednesday night 16 white preliminaries will start the show off in big style. Thursday night there will be eight white semi-finals and four colored finals. And Friday night the eight white and four colored finals will climax the program.

Few dull moments are assured. And if there are any spots where the program might seem to lag, the post band will furnish entertainment a-plenty. It's a great program, all in all.

FUNNY—TUNNEY TAKES DEMPSEY.

One of sports' finest feuds has been going along between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney ever since the famous "long count" fight when the scholarly ex-marine ended the Manassa Mauler's ring career.

And so it is amazing, indeed, to find Tunney taking Dempsey's side in a mythical engagement between the Colorado jaw-puncher and Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis. Here's Tunney's story:

"NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Jack Dempsey knocked out Joe Louis here tonight—in a mythical ring battle envisioned by none other than Gene Tunney, who used to be a boxing man himself.

"Gene was asked by the editors of Look to put on a contest between the present heavyweight champion and Jack Dempsey in his prime. Gene obliged with a blow-by-blow description, illustrated by a running picture story made up of sketches and composite photographs. The story appears in the issue of Look, out today.

"Says Gene of the fight: 'One has to go back to the Homeric contest between Ulysses and Iru, the Beggar, to find its equal. For let it be known by all that never before have two gladiators with such capacity for destruction been pitted against each other.'

"The fight, brief but thrilling, ended two and a half minutes after the opening bell. Louis had the better of it at the beginning and in fact succeeded in knocking the Manassa Mauler down with his deadly right—probably the hardest punch ever seen in a ring when working right. But Jack came back, 'raining deadening rabbit blows' on the back of Joe's neck.

"Then, 'Dempsey moved close with a left uppercut meant for the liver. Jack's blow was low. The referee cautioned Dempsey. . . . and later, 'another blow landed smack on the top of Jack's head. . . . Dempsey pitched forward as though hit by a club, and catching Louis around the waist, saved himself from falling. . . . As they broke, Dempsey landed with a terrific thud against Louis' jaw.'

"From that point the fight was all Dempsey's. Joe went down but was too dazed to take his full count of nine. When he got up, 'Dempsey leaped in with another overhead right that landed behind Louis' left ear. With the landing of that blow the 'call of the wild' in Louis was silenced, and the abysmal urge in Dempsey was gratified. Louis fell face down, where he was counted out.

"It might have been different if Joe could have taken it as well as he could dish it out. But Gene Tunney, still literary, prefers to put it this way for Look: 'Had Louis' resistance been commensurate with the force of his own blow, he would have won.'

Eight District B Ring Titles at Stake

BOUTS TO START
AT 8:30 TONIGHT
AT FT. MAC GYM

16 Preliminaries Open
CCC Program—Post's
Needy Benefit.

By JACK TROY.

Out of a group of 8,500 boys scattered throughout five states in 45 camps, district champions have been crowned, and tonight, starting at 8:30, first batch of the 80 CCC survivors will begin fighting for the boxing titles of District B in the new Fort McPherson ring.

Finest fighters of District B will battle for championships in eight classes—flyweight, bantamweight, featherweight, lightweight, welterweight, middleweight, light heavyweight and heavyweight.

White fighters will hold forth in tonight's opening events—the first 16 preliminaries of the championships. For the following two nights, white semi-finals and finals and all-colored finals will be fought.

As Brigadier General Robert O. Van Horn says: "Forty fast bouts are scheduled—120 rounds of as fast fighting as youngsters, eating their hearts out to be champs, can put out. White and colored championships will be settled.

In Post's Gym.
"The fights will be held in the newly conditioned post gymnasium at Fort McPherson. There will be ample free parking space. The 22nd Infantry band will furnish music during the tournament. The gymnasium is steam heated. "First fight each evening at 8:30 o'clock.

"The price, small for the fun assured—$1.00 ringside; general admission 50 cents, tax included. "Tickets may be purchased at the George Muse Clothing Company. Ladies will be welcome. "The tournament is sponsored by the personnel of Fort McPherson and District "B." Civilian Conservation Corps, Fourth Corps Area. All proceeds to go to Fort McPherson Community Chest."

All the boys were on hand yesterday and finished their training in the new gymnasium. A likely looking bunch of lads they are, too. They have to be good, or at least rugged, to have survived the sub-district shelling.

SUMMERS, VAN HORN.
A prime amount of work, getting everything in readiness for the event has been turned in by Major Owen Summers, aide to General Van Horn; Captain James Emigh and First Lieutenant James Brown.

And it does seem as if their efforts will be rewarded by large turnouts each night. The fight program has captured the popular fancy. It is a well known fact that the boys, while fighting for glory also will fight for keeps.

Mike Panos, who won flyweight and welterweight championships in the Canal Zone and also made quite a name at Fort Benning, is to be one of the referees. Carl East, who has long ago retired as a fighter, is the other third man.

Judges will be Second Lieutenant Russell Murray, who boxed at the Citadel, and Lieutenant Fred Corbin, former Kansas City Athletic Club fighter. The timer is Lieutenant D. J. Richardson.

TONIGHT'S PAIRINGS.
Flyweight: Hamilton, Hugh 112 vs. Wright, Walter 113; Stanton, Lewis 112 vs. Case, Charles 113; Case, John, bye.

TED LYONS SIGNS.
CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—(AP)—The Chicago White Sox received today the signed contract of Ted Lyons, veteran pitcher who jumped from Baylor University direct to the major leagues 18 years ago.

Following McGill's address, principal speech of the evening, W. C. Potter, prominent businessman of New York and Albany, strongly supported the "open stake" suggestion and enthusiastic civil leaders immediately pledged more than $1,000 toward adding the event to the 1941 trials. It was pointed out that since the 1940 trials will be run February 19, insufficient time is available to permit creation of the new event this year.

Talks also were made by Trammell Scott, of Atlanta, and Bob Sealy, of Cottonwood, Ala., president of the Southern Field Trial Association, who recommended the need for suitable barns to take care of the many fine horses which play an important part in the success of the trials each year.

Fistic Maneuvers At Fort Mac!

If anybody had dropped a hat while this picture was being made yesterday at Fort McPherson, a free-for-all quite likely would have ensued. The boys really will fight at the drop of a hat. Major Owen Summers, Captain James Emigh and First Lieutenant Eugene Brown are shown in the foreground with the District B survivors of the CCC boxing tournament behind them. The big firing in the post championships will begin tonight.

J. P. C. Quint Meets Stars Here Tonight

Progressives Will Battle Strong Court Team From Thomaston.

Coach Walton Laney's Progressive basketball team will find out tonight whether or not 13 is their unlucky number.

They battle the State All-Stars at the J. P. C. court in quest of their thirteenth consecutive victory.

The Thomaston aggregation has been considerably strengthened since their first appearance here. Three men have been added to the squad. Their lineup will have Boss and Parker, forwards; Reeves, center, and Wilder and Howard, guards. Two first-class reserves, Lester and Causey, will be along.

The Progressives, visibly suffering from the lack of practice, appeared weak in their last contest against the Savannah team. Had their foes been a bit stronger Laney's squad would have run into trouble keeping their record of 13 wins. With snow on the ground the Progressives were unable to practice regularly for the past two weeks.

They have been working overtime this week to catch up. Tonight's lineup will have the two Katz boys at forward, Steve Browdy, center, and Greenberg and Ben Browdy, guards.

The play of the Browns has been the highlight of the team's play recently. This pair of brothers has accounted for most of the scoring, and each has played well defensively.

The J. P. C. Cubs will play the Decatur Independents in a preliminary game at 7:30 o'clock. The main game will start at 8:45.

Sunday night the J. P. C. varsity will meet Peerless Mills, of Chattanooga.

Brenda, 'Shipwreck' Take Plane to Nassau

Ex-Kentucky Grid Star Linked Romantically With Glamour Girl.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 30.—(AP)—Brenda Frazier and John S. (Shipwreck) Kelly, former All-American football star at the University of Kentucky, left Miami today for Nassau, Bahamas, aboard a Pan-American clipper.

The New York glamour girl and her escort, now part owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers football team, arrived from New York aboard a regular passenger plane.

Their trip aroused new stories of a romance, but in New York her family secretary said they were "just friends."

Brenda is making her second plane trip of the winter to Nassau to visit her grandmother, Lady William Taylor.

Cracker Five Loses, 30-29, To Goodyear

Rockmart Upsets Atlantans, Who Miss Services of Virlyn Moore.

ROCKMART, Ga., Jan. 30.—The Goodyear basketball team of Rockmart became the first team of the year other than the New York Celtics to whip the powerful Atlanta Crackers tonight when they nosed out the quintet which previously had won 18 games in a bitterly fought struggle, 30-29.

Earlier in the season the Crackers completely outplayed Rockmart in Atlanta, but tonight the home team came through with its greatest win in many seasons.

Coach Shep Lauter, of the Crackers, while paying tribute to Rockmart as a "wonderfully improved team," pointed out that the small court here was a handicap to his club and said the absence of Virlyn Moore, who is ill with the flu, was sorely felt by the Crackers.

Cecil Butler was the referee in tonight's thriller, which was anybody's ball game right down to the final whistle. A capacity crowd attended and cheered madly for the home team boys.

"You can't win 'em all," said Shep Lauter, "especially when you play as many games away from home as the Crackers."

Next game for the Crackers will be against the Mercer Bears at Sports arena in Atlanta Friday night.

Clark Five Trims Xavier Team, 35-33
Clark university squared its basketball series with Xavier last night by trimming the New Orleans negro quintet, 35-33, in a thrilling finish.

Little Aaron Watson, who sank 19 points, broke a 33-33 tie a minute before the final whistle by sneaking through the Xavier defense for a "crip" shot and gaining revenge for Monday night's 34-31 defeat.

A Matter of Condition.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—For 30 years Artie McGovern has supervised the physical welfare of some of the most distinguished figures in the country. Merchants, statesmen, financiers, physicians, lawyers, actors, now and then a golfer or a ball player—he once took 51 pounds of Babe Ruth—he puts them in trim and keeps them that way.

"And the first thing I have to do is to convince them that my ideas on the subjects are better than theirs," he said, recently. "I turn away more clients than I take. Usually the main disagreement concerns the degree in which they shall exercise. They—almost all of them—want to do it the hard way, and they get sore when I won't let them."

"The average man who comes to me used to exercise, but hasn't been in a gymnasium or taken part in any sport for years and is worried about his expanding waistline. I listen to him, have him carefully examined and then I tell him what he ought to do. That is, go on a diet and take light—very GRANTLAND RICE.

"Nine times out of ten he shakes his head and says, 'No, You don't understand. What I want to do is to play squash or handball, box, wrestle, punch the bag—you know—work hard and get fit again.'"

"I try to explain to him that that's the worst thing he possibly could do and when he gets obstinate about it, I tell him, 'I have 20 boys working for me. I could put them to work on you in relays—one to box with you, one to wrestle with you, one to play squash with you and so on. I can give you anything you want—but I won't. We'll have to do things my way—or you'll have to go somewhere else.'"

"That's where we finish—or start."

THE CASE OF RUTH.
"The Babe was that way. I had to win an argument from him before we could get to work. He was having trouble with his weight and he wanted to get ready for the next season. He thought the way to do that was to work like a dog in the gymnasium."

"I wish you could have your own way," I told him, "you wouldn't even be in shape to go south in the spring. All the work you have to do will be light work to keep your muscles supple. We'll take care of the rest by diet."

"I wish you could have heard him. The word 'diet' frightened him, as it frightens most people. He thought I was going to give him nothing but grapefruit and dry toast. But I talked him into starting with me, anyway—and once we started he was surprised."

"I simply put him on a well-balanced diet. I gave him as much to eat as he wanted. Very often, he couldn't eat all I put on the table for him. I gave him meat twice a day. He had fish, shell fish, consommés and, of course, plenty of string beans, spinach, salads and fruit."

"Faithful adherence to the diet, plus the light exercise I outlined for him, put him in better shape than he had been for years."

HE'S AGAINST EXERCISE.
"It might sound funny coming from me," Artie continued, "but I am against exercise except in the mildest form. Some of the healthiest men I know never have exercised or played games in their lives—and they will outlive all the famous athletes you ever saw."

"The businessman who eats too much, drinks too much and smokes too much—as most men do—and sits at his desk five or six days a week thinks he is improving his condition by playing golf or tennis or some other game on Saturdays or Sundays or both. Actually, all he is doing is increasing his blood pressure, putting a strain on his heart, and burning up needed energy. He would be much better off if he regulated his diet and cut down on his drinking and smoking. He would feel better, look better and live longer."

$200,000 SPENT
BY A'S MANAGER
FOR 18 MONTHS

Connie Hopes Rubeling, Besse, McCoy, Others Will Bring Flag.

By TED MEIER.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30.—(AP) Connie Mack has taken the rubber band off his bankroll in an effort to put the Athletics back on top of the baseball world.

In the last 18 months the 77-year-old leader of the A's has spent more than $200,000 for players he hopes will bring back to Shibe park the glories of his championship teams of the 1910-1914 and 1929-1931 eras.

Mack and breaker of several star-spangled collections of ball players, Connie expects to pilot at least one more A's team to a pennant before that still nebulous day when he stops wagging his score card and turns his managerial duties over to his son and assistant, Earle.

TOPS LIST.

Topping the list of players Connie is banking on to make a pennant contender of the A's is 22-year-old Benny McCoy, to whom Earle Mack paid $45,000 of "Dad's" dough at Grand Rapids, Mich., Monday. McCoy, former Detroit second baseman, was declared a free agent along with 90 other Tiger chattels recently by Judge Landis. McCoy's bonus was the largest amount ever received by a free agent for signing a contract.

Connie, in New Haven as an honor guest of the Connecticut Sports Writers' Association, was "very much pleased and gratified" with the deal.

Other recent acquisitions Connie counts as pennant weavers include: Bill Lillard, shortstop, brought a year ago from San Francisco for $35,000.

Al Rubeling, rookie infielder from Atlanta, purchased last fall. HEUSSER, BESSE.

Ed Heusser and Herman Besse, pitchers, purchased from Memphis during the winter for an aggregate $40,000 and players.

Wilson Miles, outfielder, purchased from Chattanooga a year ago for $25,000.

Eldon Hogsett and John Babich, pitchers, drafted from Kansas City and Minneapolis at $7,500 each; total $15,000.

Sam Chapman, outfielder, who got a bonus of $8,500 in the summer of 1933 for joining the A's direct from the University of California.

Pat McLaughlin, pitcher, whom Mack signed as a free agent at an estimated $5,000.

Mack has also given salary raises to several of his veteran players—notably Bob Johnson, slugging outfielder, who ranked third in the American league last year in batting in runs.

Auburn May Switch 1940 Football Games
MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 30.—(AP)—The Alabama Journal says a campaign has been started to switch the Auburn-Mississippi State and Auburn-Florida games to Montgomery in 1940.

The Tigers are scheduled to play Mississippi State in Birmingham, October 12, and the Florida Gators in Gainesville, November 30.

The Journal said it "had learned that the city commission, civic clubs and Auburn alumni members were co-ordinating their efforts in switching the games to enlarged Cranton Bowl."

Googe Prather Leads Tide Quintet Against Tech Tonight.

ALABAMA SEEKS EIGHTH VICTORY IN CONFERENCE

Prather Was Not in Line-up When 'Bama Lost Twice.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.
Bent on improving their Southeastern conference record of seven victories in nine starts, Alabama's powerful Crimson Tide basketball team, headed by the great Googe Prather at center, move into Atlanta tonight for a game with Georgia Tech at 8 o'clock in the Yellow Jacket gymnasium.

Only Tennessee and Vanderbilt have been able to whip the Tide this season in conference games and these two defeats came when Hank Crisp's boys were playing without the services of Prather, one of the leading scorers in the south last season.

To show how valuable he is, Googe, and that's his real name, returned to the lineup last Saturday night and the Crimson proceeded to whip powerful Kentucky, and rather convincingly, 36 to 32.

TECH NEEDS SPARK.

Therefore, Tech's sophomores can hardly hope to blast Alabama, which will be playing the first of four games away from home. The Yellow Jackets were at their season's worst last Saturday against Georgia but hope to regain the sparkle which defeated Mississippi and Vanderbilt earlier in the schedule.

Prather isn't the only man on Alabama's team who is capable of scoring plenty. There is Jack Brantner who follows the lanky center's point gathering total of 74 with 63, Herman Roberson has bagged 57 followed by Tom Stone with 34 and James Busby with 32. The Yellow Jackets' point-gathering will be mainly handled, as usual, by Carlton Lewis and Soneyard Johnson.

Tech is not expected to win the game but stranger things have happened. If the Jackets can regain the poise and confidence shown in the last half against the Johnny Rebs it will be quite a battle. But if the Techs insist on throwing the ball away and giving the opposition points by sloppy guarding as they did against Georgia, it will be a sad night.

WON TWO, LOST TWO.

Tech has a record of two victories and two defeats in conference competition, winning from Vanderbilt and Mississippi and losing to Florida and Georgia. The Jackets dropped their only other game of the season to South Carolina.

Alabama has defeated the Birmingham Y. M. H. A., Florida twice, Vanderbilt, Mississippi and Kentucky. The Tide lost to L. S. U. and Tennessee.

The return of Prather makes Alabama one of the favorites for the conference title. He was on the shelf for a couple of weeks but is back in action. He shot 11 points against Kentucky and played only a little more than half the game. It's worth the admission price to watch him play.

DUNN, BAGGETT WORK TONIGHT

Jack Baggett, Chattanooga, and Dynamite Dunn, Lanett, Ala., will complete preparations at 6 o'clock tonight at Bond's gymnasium, corner Edgewood and Boulevard, for their 10-round fight Thursday night in the East Point auditorium.

Proceeds from Thursday's fights will go into East Point's fund to fight infantile paralysis. Two fast six-round fights, featuring Emery (Jabbin Foots) Jackson and Thomas Glass in the first, and Benny Johnson and Young Lucas, of Augusta, in the other, are scheduled for the semi-final double-header.

Two four-round preliminaries will open the program. Dunn is an old Atlanta favorite and is making his first appearance here in many months. He is first assistant to Larry Avera, of the Lanett (Ala.) police force. Avera is the chief.

Baggett is rated among the four leading heavyweights in the Southern states.

Popular prices will prevail. This is the second of a series of semi-monthly boxing matches for the East Point auditorium.

SUHR WANTS MORE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30.—(P)—Gussie Suhr, first baseman of the Philadelphia Nationals, disclosed today he had not signed his 1940 contract because he was "negotiating" for a small increase in salary.

U. S. Won't Challenge For Davis Cup in '40

By HENRY SUPER.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(UP)—The United States will not challenge Australia for the Davis cup this year, Holcombe Ward, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, said today.

The deadline for filing challenges in the competition for the international trophy is tomorrow night and Ward doubted that any nation would enter.

"The wars in Europe and elsewhere in the world," he said, "probably will result in shelving the competition until peaceful, happier times prevail."

Under the rules governing Davis cup competition, the United States—or any other nation—could challenge Australia, despite the war.

"But that," Ward said, "would not be a sporting proposition. The leading Australian players, Adrian Quist and John Bromwich, who won the cup from us last year, are known to be doing war duty. Any nation that might decide to ignore the war conditions would be strictly within its right and the conditions that govern the cup matches by filing its challenge. But according to information we have here, none has done so."

COLUMBUS WINS 1ST-HALF TITLE, BEATING G.M.A.

Canton Wallops Commercial Quintet at Grady Court, 45-31.

By ROY WHITE.

Columbus, Tech High and Canton were winners Friday in the closing round of the first half of the Big Seven prep basketball race. Columbus beat G. M. A., 35 to 32, at College Park in an afternoon game for its sixth straight victory. Tech High beat Boys' High, 28 to 23, and Canton beat Commercial, 45 to 31, in a double-header Friday night on the Henry Grady court.

The Smithies moved into second place in the standings with its first win of the year over Boys' High.

Trailing the major part of three quarters, Tech High took the lead just before the third period ended, 20 to 18, and was never headed, gradually increasing the lead as the game neared the end.

Both teams guarded unusually well, so that the scoring was held down on both sides and during the fourth period both teams resorted to long-distance shooting.

Tech High scored 10 field goals and made good only eight out of 17 foul attempts. Boys' High scored nine field goals and five out of eight foul tries.

Deese's field goal in the first minute gave Boys' High a lead which they held, 7-6, at the quarter. They led, 13 to 12, at the half. In the third period Tech High went ahead, 20 to 18.

It was Coach Sidney Scarborough's first victory over Boys' High since he took over the Smithie team following Gabe Tolbert's resignation, due to illness.

In a preliminary to the Tech High-Boys' High game Canton ran away with Commercial, after the Typists had taken an early lead, 11 to 8, at the quarter. The score was tied at 19 all at the half.

Haley, with 20 points, led Canton's attack, while Najour playing his best game for Commercial was close behind with 17 points.

Smithwick and Adams contributed 19 points to Canton's cause in addition to holding their own at the guard posts.

Columbus High Wins 1st Half In Big Seven.

Columbus High won its fourteenth straight victory and the first-half of the big Seven basketball race with a 35-to-32 victory over G. M. A. Tuesday afternoon on the College Park courts.

It was one of the lowest scores the Columbus team has been held to this season and Solley, G. M. A.'s center, did the best guarding

Bob Chipman Thrives When Going Is Tough

Rookie Southpaw Keeps in Shape Hunting and Playing Basketball.

By IRVIN McBRAYER.

Some people get a thrill out of this and others out of that, but who ever heard of a pitcher getting a big kick when he has to face a powerful hitter with two men out and the bases loaded? Maybe he's got the stuff it takes to cope with the situation.

Bob Chipman, towering southpaw Cracker rookie, is this bozo who has such queer notions of enjoyment. Last year as a youngster only 20 he was good enough to stick with the Crackers for a few weeks of the regular season. And it was his first year in pro ball.

Chipman was farmed to Savannah after his brief sojourn with Atlanta, but the Indians sent him over to Greenwood, Miss., around the middle of June. The big left-hander showed the boys in the Cotton States league how to chunk that baseball, winning 13 games in three

Frank Pytlak Waits For Better Contract

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 30.—(P) Frank Pytlak, catcher for Cleveland in the American baseball league, said today he is awaiting a "new contract" for 1940.

Pytlak asserted he returned the contract first proffered because "it didn't call for as much money as I think I'm worth."

job of the year. He held Jim Hower, Columbus' high scoring center, to a "measly" 11 points. It was the first time this season Hower has been well covered.

While Hower was being stopped, Pennington, a forward, and Carl Walter, a guard, broke through with 11 and 10 points, respectively, to share high scoring honors with Hower.

Carl Anderson led G. M. A.'s scoring with 10 points, followed by Poole and Finkbeiner with six each.

CLARK GRIFFITH ISSUES ANNUAL BLAST AT YANKS

Old Fox Makes Yearly Statement That Champs. Can Be Had.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(P)—Clark Griffith, the Old Fox of baseball, was packing his bags for his annual trip to the south for spring training when the telephone rang.

"Hello," said Griffith, "oh, yes, a bout McCoy. What did they pay that young fellow?"

The man on the other end of the telephone told him.

Griffith, president of the Washington Senators, had been bidding for the services of Benny McCoy, the Detroit infielder who was recently declared a free agent. McCoy sold himself to the Philadelphia Athletics yesterday.

"Forty-five thousand," said the Old Fox. "Well, that's a lot of money. I sure hope he makes good."

As he was leaving someone asked him who was going to win the American league championship.

"It's too early to tell," he answered. "But put this down, don't count them Yankees in yet!"

That signalled the start of the 1940 season. Griffith has issued his annual blast at the Yanks.

Chicago Led Big Ten In Helping Athletes

By STEVE SNIDER.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—(UP)—A report from Big Ten headquarters revealed today that the University of Chicago, which abandoned football because of "a general overemphasis" on the sport at other schools, led the entire conference in financial aid to athletes the last two years.

Major John L. Griffith, Big Ten commissioner, released the figures with approval of all conference universities.

In the three phases of athletic aid permitted by the Big Ten—scholarships, student loans and campus jobs—Chicago was first in total value of scholarships to athletes, fourth in student loans and third in total salaries for campus jobs over a two-year period.

Its two-year total was $75,943. Northwestern was second with $61,969, Iowa was third with $47,878.28. Michigan totaled $38,150.33; Indiana, $35,048.76; Wisconsin, $28,224.15; Illinois, $28,402.50; Purdue, $25,009.79; Minnesota, $12,237.68, and Ohio State, $11,589.02.

When Chicago announced it had withdrawn from intercollegiate football at the end of its most disastrous season in history, a spokesman for the university trustees said the decision was reached because the Maroons "could not continue to play football and remain profitable or find suitable material without resorting to subsidization."

Dorothy Fires Sub-Par Golf To Meet Ellamae Williams Today.

By DOROTHY KIRBY.
MIAMI BILTMORE, Jan. 30.—For the first time since I arrived here last Friday I am really warm in this land of sunshine. Today was just perfect and the sun was bearing down in no uncertain terms.

Also, I hit the little golf ball fairly well. I guess old age has me for my muscles just won't limber up in cold weather. I think they are on their way to recovery now, though.

At the end of the first nine holes, I was surprised to find that I had a 36 and was 7 up. However, my opponent, Mrs. H. D. Sterrett, didn't play well at all except on the 9th hole, where she got a birdie 3 to win. I won on the 11th by an 8-and-7 score. I was 5 under women's par for the 11 holes.

Everything went just right for me this morning, but I only hope that I have saved a few shots for tomorrow, because I'll sure need them. A full day is in store. I play a match with Ellamae Williams in the morning and the winner takes on another opponent in the afternoon.

They play these two matches in one day so that the finals will be on Friday and the ones who are planning on going to Palm Beach for the tournament there beginning Monday, will have plenty of time.

I believe some sort of record was set today when Grace Amory, the medalist, had 10 1-putt greens out of the 12 holes in the play-off. She was playing Mary Jane Garman and with this exhibition of putting, Grace had it her way from start to finish, winning, 8-6. Louise Suggs came through again today and won her match from Jeanette Myers, 4-3, but as luck will have it, she runs head-on into Patty Berg in the morning. If Louise hits the ball like she is capable Patty won't be able to let up a minute.

Patty Berg defeated Mrs. Richard E. Jarrett, 9 and 8 yesterday. Betty Jameson defeated Mrs. George E. Wilcox Jr., 6 and 4. Grace Amory defeated Mary Jane Garman, 8 and 6. Noema Copie defeated Mrs. Harvey F. Mack, 7 and 5. Jean Bauer defeated Mrs. Lillian Zech, 4 and 3. Shirley Ann Johnson defeated Helen White, 3 and 2. Mrs. Leah Solomon defeated Ruth Batchelder, 4 and 3. Ellamae Williams defeated Mrs. Thomas Noland, 2 and 1. Clara Callender defeated Mrs. Lillian T. O'Reilly, 3 and 2.

Few of the modern generation will believe that Sewanee's Tiger, back in 1899, roared defiance at all opposition, played six games in five days, won them all and held its foes scoreless! . . . Sports folks are still chuckling over Bill (Boston Post) Cunningham's magazine article which declared that football is not for his son . . . You see, he has no children . . . And just the other eve Cunningham addressed a sports group in Dallas, Tex., and said "there is no finer way to develop Americanism so sorely needed in these times, than by allowing our boys to play football!" . . . Quo Vadis, Cunningham? . . . Tommy (Killer) Kline, Savannah featherweight, having knocked off all eastern importations, is said to be headed for the big time . . . Tiger Flowers, a pretty fair middleweight, came out of the coastal section. . . Chicago Daily News reports the New York Celtics played . . . and were eliminated . . . in $10,000 tournament won last year by the Renaissance.

Racing Roundup
MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 30.—(AP)—Jockey Don Meade lifted himself at least temporarily from a bad riding slump at Hialeah today to win the featured St. Petersburg purse against a top-rank field. He brought in Mrs. C. G. Clear's Flying Lill in the seven-furlong event to pay $13.20 for two in competition with one of the best fields of fillies and mares ever assembled on a winter track. Five of the eight horses were hunched at the wire. Meade a half length ahead, followed by James Emery's Dolly Val and, in third, the favorite, Unerring from Herbert M. Woolf's stable. W. E. Boeing's Parscout was fourth and Gustave Ring's Lady Maryland, voted the best mare of 1939, was fifth. Meade had been in the doldrums, with a bare half dozen winners in 1940, although he was the leading jockey of 1939 with 236 victories. His mount, Flying Lill, was making her first start since winning a handicap at Keeneland in October. The customers at Hialeah, faithful despite the recent cold wave, relaxed in warm temperature in the mid-70s. In the customary opening baby race, H. P. Headley's filly Not Yet, the favorite, came home in front of Queen Es and Zacatine, and paid $8.90 for two. Eddie Accaro added another victory to his fast-growing string by bringing Jewell in to victory in the second at a price of $15.20 for two. Gamma, an extreme outsider, was second, and Dred was third. Another leader, Apprentice Flinchum, piloted Nightland to victory in the third. He defeated nine other three-year-olds. In second was Jessie Gladys, five lengths before the favorite, Multitude. Back from a 10-day suspension, Charlie Durando rode to victory on Mar Le, which had been second in two previous efforts. Storms, a strong favorite, saved the place by a head over High One.

Druid Hills Elects Its Officers Tonight
Druid Hills golfers will hold their annual business meeting, and election of officers at 6 o'clock at the club house on Ponce de Leon avenue. The meeting was postponed from last week due to the snow storm. Election of officers will open the program. A buffet supper will be served at 7 o'clock. The new officers will be introduced to the membership at 8 o'clock, after which a dance will close the program. Charles Ewing, president, and Ross Lucas, manager of the club, will be in charge of tonight's program.

Jockey Jack Flinchum, Hialeah's promising young apprentice, will pilot the Lewin stable's horses the remainder of the Florida season.

Ben Jones apparently isn't content to win only one prize—he wants to win 'em all. The Parnell (Mo.) maestro, who trains the Calumet farm horses for Warren Wright, won the $350 first prize for trainers having the best records for the first third of the Hialeah meeting. ... FIGHT FOR LOVE ...

Star's Typewriting Teacher Calls, Saying He Has a Job for Her

By SYLVIA TAYLOR.

INSTALLMENT II.

It was a shabby little room but it was the only place in the apartment that was orderly. Even the closet, where were hung the cheap little dresses she wore to school, was as clean as soap and water could make it. On the dresser were her cosmetics (lipstick, powder, and a jar of cleansing cream), and a small framed photograph of a distinguished-looking man which had been cut from a newspaper. In vain Mamie had tried to find out who this was and why her daughter had framed it. But Star knew better than to tell her mother that it was her own conception of the father she remembered only vaguely.

Star's father had been deserted by the mother and baby when the child was three years old. For years now Mamie had insisted that he was dead. Star knew this photograph was of some one else, but she chose to forget the real name and pretend it was a picture of her own flesh and blood. She loathed the man whom she was told to address as Daddy. Joe Delevan, Mamie's present husband, drove a truck at night. Star was never able to find out where he went. His days were spent at home quarrelling with his wife. Ever since her daughter could remember, Mamie had clung to this second husband although she spent hours weeping him. Such had been Star's girlhood.

Lying straight and tense in her bed, Star could not sleep. How much longer must her life go on like this? Was there never to be any change? Surely, in the beginning, her mother must have loved her, but so far as Star could see there had been little evidence of it. Even the name which Star disliked had been given to her with more sentiment than sense. Yet with what a glimmer of hope even then that the sleeping mite in her arms might fit them both to the dramatic heights of which Mamie Bright had dreamed.

Star's earliest memories were of squalor and quarrelling, but there were moments when Mamie had hinted at better days. There had been a time when she had "been somebody and had things," she insinuated. But when Star tried to question her about it she closed up like a clam. Her own ambition was that her daughter should follow the career Mamie considered herself had missed. From the time Star could walk she had taken dancing lessons until she flatly refused to go on with them. It was ridiculous, she insisted, to throw money away preparing for a profession she had no intention of pursuing, and she worked harder than ever at her shorthand and typing, determined by this method to make her escape.

But how? Clearly the time had come when the break must be made, but could a girl who had just graduated find a position paying enough so that she could live away from home? Never again would she submit to such humiliation as that she had suffered tonight. She did not cry about it, having learned long ago the uselessness of tears. But there must be a way out, she told herself, and she would keep on trying until she found it.

Morning had not lessened her resolution. She decided to go to an employment agency and register as soon as she had finished the dishes. Joe had breakfasted when he came home early in the morning. The kitchen was in its customary state of disorder with eggshells and coffee grounds all over the sink. Star made herself some fresh coffee and drank it standing at the window looking down upon the busy street. Then she plunged into her task, swallowing her distaste, bringing order into chaos which would be wasted labor just as soon as Mamie entered the kitchen. So many times Star had cleaned it, feeling as she did now. This morning seemed no different from any other until the telephone rang.

She answered it fearfully. Could it be Leslie? Calling as he had promised in spite of what had happened?

It was not Leslie, but Star's typewriting teacher.

"I think I have a position for you," he said.

Such commonplace words to open a new world before her despairing eyes.

"You have?" she repeated, dazed.

He must have thought her very stupid, but to save her life she could not think of anything else to say.

"How soon can you come to my office?" he continued.

"Oh," she answered, "Right away. I'll be there in half an hour."

Leaving the dishpan in the pan of soapy water, she walked from the kitchen into her own room, where she changed from the cotton house coat she wore into her best school dress. Regarding herself in the mirror as she adjusted her cheap little hat, she wondered anxiously if she looked old enough. She was not worried about her ability. Mr. Beverly had often told her she was the best student in his class, but would any one else in the business world think she was capable of holding down a job?

She sat across the desk from him a little later clasping her pocketbook in nervous hands.

"It's a real break for you," he said. "That is if you're willing to live away from home."

"Live away from home?" She must be dreaming. Miracles like this couldn't really happen.

"You see it's like this. Mrs. Lambert is a writer. Nina Lambert, perhaps you've heard of her."

"No," Star admitted. But then she didn't read very much.

"That doesn't matter. What she wants is a secretary who will live at her house. She likes to have one on the spot as she doesn't work at regular hours. It will be a wonderful opportunity for you if you can get it."

"What makes you think I can?" the girl asked anxiously.

"Because Mrs. Lambert asked me to recommend some one from the graduating class and I suggested you. She isn't paying much to start with but you will have no expense except your clothes, and the experience will be invaluable to you."

"It would be wonderful," she agreed solemnly.

"You don't mind living away from home?"

"No," she said so emphatically that he smiled.

"All right. That's settled then. I'll give you her address so you can get right up to see her and meantime I'll telephone that you are coming."

As she lifted the brass knocker on the white door of the writer's residence Star's hands were cold with excitement. Suppose Mrs. Lambert didn't like her? But she would. Oh, she must! One couldn't come this close to escape and be thrust back into prison.

A comfortable middle-aged woman opened the door.

"The woman smiled. 'No, I am the housekeeper. Are you the girl Mr. Beverly is sending?'"

Star nodded and was shown into a room bright with flowers and sunshine. It was like walking into another world. Gay and friendly like the one where Judge and Mrs. Bennett lived. But the woman who rose to meet her resembled no one Star had ever seen before.

Nina Lambert was short, plump and fortyish, with gray-streaked brown hair and large, sparkling gray eyes. She wore a house coat of striped yellow and red, which somehow seemed to suit her. She was smoking a cigarette, which was held in a long amber holder. But she didn't inhale and she blew little puffs of smoke into the air like a bright-colored toy engine. Her smile was the kindest Star had ever seen. It warmed her like the sun streaming through the open windows.

"How do you do?" Nina said.

"Won't you sit down? Would you like a cigarette? No? Then sit here where it's more comfortable. I suppose Mr. Beverly has told you what I want. I warn you I'm a devil to work for. Some days I don't write a line. Others I work far into the night. And I've acquired the very lazy habit of dictating my stories. . . . Do you think you can stand it? Are you unwilling to come here and live?"

Her voice was fascinating, high and sweet, pouring out in a stream of sentences which never sounded quite finished. She was making it appear as if Star were the one to be suited instead of herself.

"I should like it very much," the girl said eagerly.

"But what will your mother think about it? Will she be willing for you to stay away from home?"

A shadow as swift as the flight of a swallow crossed the girl's young face.

"My mother won't mind. But even if she does . . . I'm 18 years old."

"And determined to get out on your own just like all the beautiful heroines in my own silly books," Nina laughed. "By the way, you are very beautiful. I hope it won't interfere with your work."

Star looked at her in surprise. "Nothing shall interfere with my work," she promised.

"Well, that's fine then. Would you like to have a look at your room? It's not very big but you will have a bath of your own."

A bath of her own! Star trembled at the mere thought of such luxury. She followed the portly figure of Mrs. Epperson, the housekeeper, and gazed inwardly as she gazed at the gayly flowered wallpaper, the dresser with its dainty lace doilies, the chintz-covered easy chair and adorable little desk. Through an open door was the glimpse of pink tile and a rose-colored shower curtain.

It seemed too good to be true. "It's a nice room," Mrs. Epperson said. "And Mrs. Lambert is a fine person to work for. She has some peculiar ideas, but she is very kind."

At that moment Star did not care how peculiar the novelist's ideas might be. Anything would be better than the life she had been living with Mamie and Joe. But this place was like heaven! Never again would she doubt that there could be an answer to her prayers.

Nina was in the hall when they came down.

"When can you be here, Miss Bright?"

"Anytime."

"Tomorrow? This afternoon? I feel an idea coming on."

"This afternoon then," the girl answered.

Continued Tomorrow.

THEATER—Ruth Chatterton, famous for her portrayals in all three media of dramatic entertainment—stage, screen and radio—will be guest of the "Star Theater" in "The Last of Mrs. Cheney," over WGST at 8 o'clock tonight. Burns Mantle will introduce Miss Chatterton and make another of his interesting commentaries.

Hollywood's half of the "Star Theater" hour again will present Master of Ceremonies Ken Murray in a musical and wifeful half-hour with Kenny Baker, Frances Langford, Irene Ryan and David Brokman's Orchestra.

FRED ALLEN—Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber of Pugilism, and Fred Allen, the Dynamic Destroyer of the Airwaves, will tangle when Fred interviews Joe as his "Person You Didn't Expect to Meet" over WSB at 8 o'clock tonight.

Exchanging quip for blow and satire for sock, the go is set for fifteen minutes, with Harry von Zell the third man in the ring. Holding ringside seats, and rounding out the rest of the hour-long program will be Vincent Hoffa, the Mighty Allen Art Players, Wynn Murray, the Terry Macs and Peter van Steeden's Orchestra.

COMEDY—Grace Allen will make a lively bit of musical history when she sings the new Johnny Mercer-Hoagy Carmichael number, "Way Back in 1939 A. D.," on the Burns and Allen program over WGST at 6:30 o'clock tonight. The song is a saga of peripetries, jitters and the F. H. A.

Frank Parker, who's always making eyes at every fair charmer he sees, will sing "Faithful Forever," George Burns will try to retain his sanity during Grace's whimsies, and Ray Noble will come through with a few dead-pan jokes in the British manner. Ray also conducts the orchestra—American style.

DRAMA—Charles Boyer will star in "The Man From Yesterday," dramatized from a story by Leslie Gordon Bernard, in "Hollywood Playhouse" during its broadcast to be heard over WSB at 7 o'clock tonight.

Boyer will take the part of a shipwrecked playwright who returns to Broadway in time to reclaim a hijacked play.

TARZAN

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

FROM THE FOREST EMERGED A PIRATE SCOUT, BEARING THE "MIRACLE LIGHT", WHICH WAS SIMPLY A FLASHLIGHT.

THE APE-MAN KNEW HE WAS LOST IF ZALIM GAINED CONTROL, "PUNY MAGIC" HE SCOFFED: "TARZAN CAN DISSOLVE IT."

No. 129 Dazzled

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Chiropodist.

ZALIM TOOK IT AND TURNED ITS BUNDLING RAYS ON THE SAVAGES, TO DAZZLE THEM WITH HIS WIZARDRY.

HIS FOOT FLEW UP AND STRUCK ZALIM'S HAND, THE FLASHLIGHT FELL SHATTERED, THE WARRIORS SHOUTED IN TRIUMPH.

Your Own Horoscope for Jan. 31st

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Chiropodist.

What today means to you if you were born between—

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—Plan to be as practical as possible today until 4:25 p. m., for you may find yourself filled with idealistic schemes, or come in contact with people or affairs that are vague and unsatisfactory. After 4:25 an excellent period to attain your desires, and for dealings with prominent people.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—Financial matters, dealings with bankers, lawyers, judges, merchants, educators, especially favored today prior to 12:06 p. m. After this time stick to routine matters.

May 21st and June 20th (GEMINI)—An excellent day to get rid of old correspondence. Previous to 4:26 p. m. today is the time to engage in work that has an element of attractiveness and beauty, such as purchasing new clothes, going to the beauty shop, etc. Between 2:08 p. m. and 9:23 p. m. favors contacts with older people, business and financial dealings.

August 23d and September 22d (VIRGO)—New beginnings today are apt to be lifted suddenly out of one situation into another. Guard against high strung nerves, and being too much in a rush. Be poised and serene.

September 23d and October 22d (LIBRA)—Make the most of opportunities presented today or go out after new opportunities. Previous to 9:20 p. m. an excellent period to profit through the advice of others.

After 3:25 p. m. favors travel, interviews, correspondence.

October 23d and November 21st (SCORPIO)—Unusual developments in your affairs may be presented previous to 12:30 noon. Entirely unexpected situations of a favorable nature may arise. Be especially careful of your tongue after 12:30 p. m. and until 2:08 p. m.

November 22d and December 21st (SAGITTARIUS)—A good deal of useful work may be accomplished today through concentration and a determination to be deliberate and moderate. An excellent day for dealing with conservative people, general business, but avoid sudden changes.

December 22d and January 19, (CAPRICORN)—An excellent day for dealing with people in high position, obtaining cooperation, finances, general business, legal matters; also educational interests.

January 20th and February 18th (AQUARIUS)—After 9:46 a. m. is an excellent time for artistic efforts, work relating to beauty, and dealing with prominent people. Previous to 9:46 a. m. make a special effort to guard against impatience and over aggressiveness.

February 19th and March 20th (PISCES)—Be especially cautious around business and financial matters. Between 7:40 a. m. and 7 p. m. is an excellent period for new and important business transactions.

Schoonover, mother of Gloria Jean; Melvin Hazen, Red Skelton, Kay Kyser, Tyrone Power, Mickey Rooney, Pat O'Brien, Charles Pettijohn, Walter O'Keefe, George Allen, Gene Autry, Lieutenant James Wareau, Lieutenant J.

RESCUED This scientific-minded gent, Robert H. Duncan, took an icy bath in the Potomac so Washington police could learn how to save folks who accidentally get into cold water. Here a rescuer gets busy with a can buoy. (Acme.)

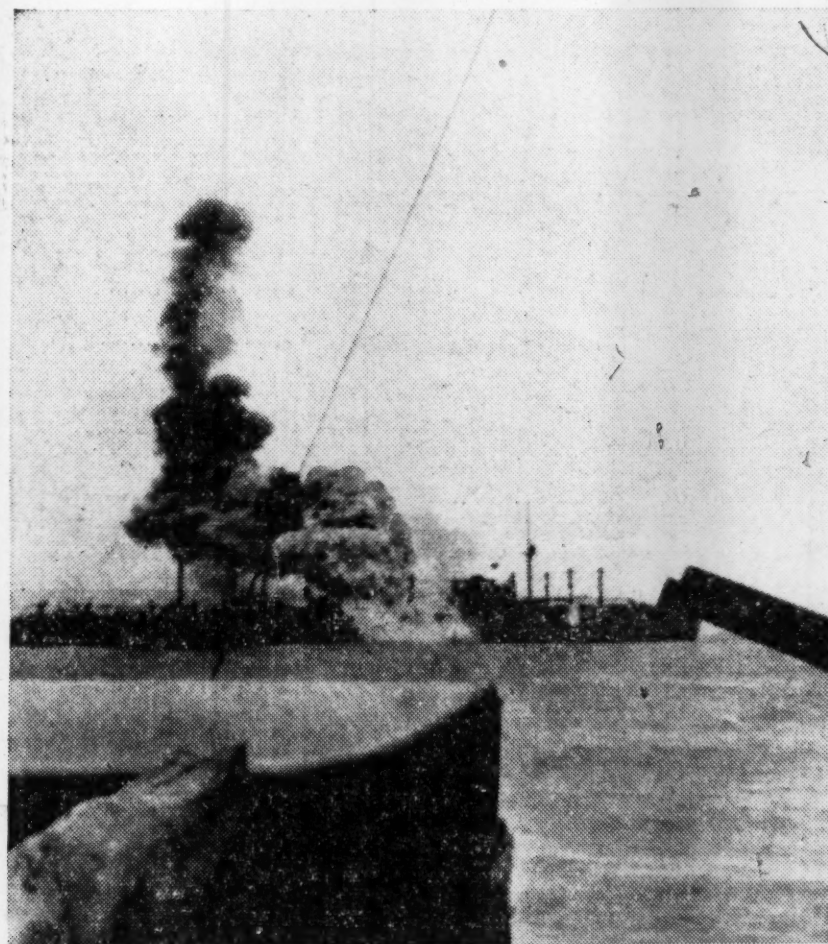

E-E-E-YOW! Look at my teeth, howls nine-day-old Glenn Ross, of St. Joseph, Mo. This son of Mr. and Mrs. T. N. Ross was born with two teeth.

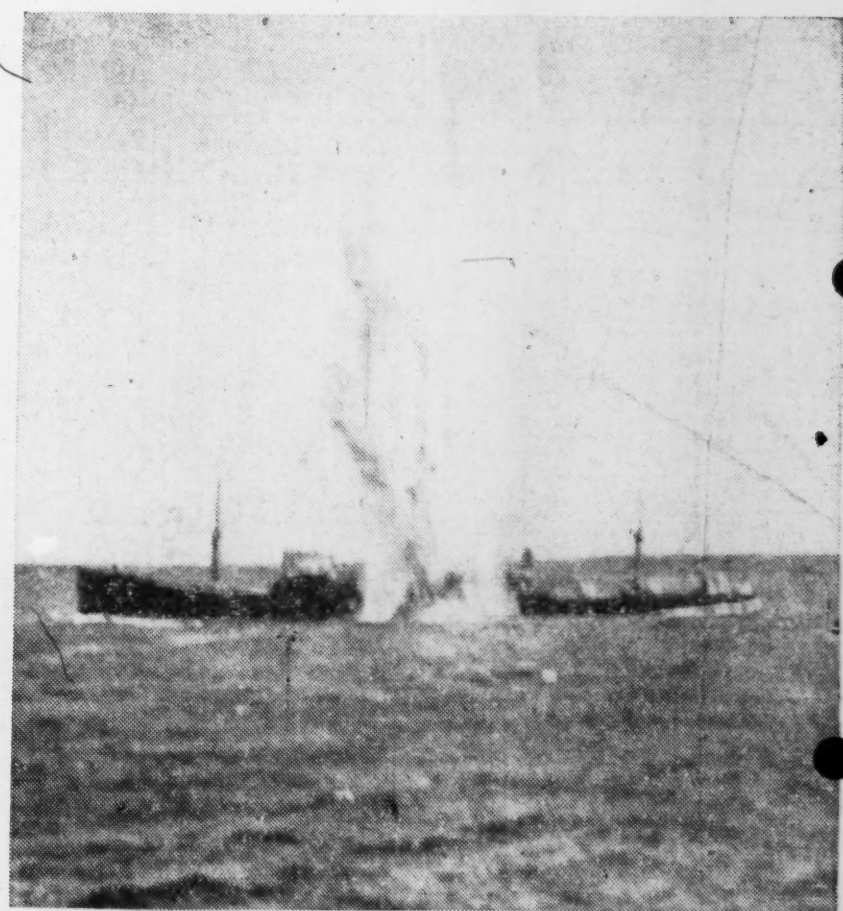

STUCK Lingering sub-freezing temperatures kept Ol' Man River gorged with ice. Typical of navigation troubles is this ferry bogged down near Natchez, Miss. A tug had to clear a path for the frozen ferry. (AP photo.) (Story on Page 1.)

WHEN DUTY CALLS The Brooklyn police answer, even if it is a little out of the routine line. George Chardt, left, and Arthur Golden helped deliver the bouncing baby of Mrs. Helen Blake at her home. Neighbors called for the cops. The infant was named George Arthur. (Acme.)

ECHOES Before the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee was scuttled, she preyed hungrily on British shipping. Here is a dramatic photograph of the Doric Star exploding amidships when the Spee blasted it into water oblivion in southern seas. (Acme.)

WHAM! Another picture from the "log of the Spee." The Ashlea, British merchant ship, gets the death blow. A torpedo did the work of destruction in this case. The wounded ship spouts water into the air. (Acme.)
